State School Funds Fight Opens on L.I.

Suburban and City Districts and 4 Cities Seek to Upset Decision on Realty Taxes as Unfair to Students in Poorer Regions

By ROY R. SILVER
Special to The New York Times

L. I., April 21—A fight over state constitutional clauses in the New Jersey Supreme Court, for instance, recently found the state's system of financing education unconstitutional, and the Legislature is trying to find a new method of financing. In Connecticut, the Appellate Court ruled in Horton v. Meskill that the funding system was unconstitutional. This case is under appeal.

The New York State case is unique, in that it introduces the concept of "municipal overburden." In joining the suit, the large cities are arguing that even if the taxing powers of districts are equalized in accordance with the Serrano norms, the cities would still be at a disadvantage because they have expenses not encountered by suburban districts.

In today's trial, the local school districts also contend that New York State's method of distributing its educational resources is unconstitutional under state law because it favors the so-called rich school districts to the detriment of the poorer ones.

The suit, initiated by the Levittown School Board and

EGYPT AND CHINA SIGN ARMS PACT, HAIL CLOSER TIES

Cairo Is Said to Gain Source of MIG Spare Parts Lost by Break With Moscow

By Reuters

PEKING, April 21—Egypt and China signed a military protocol today, saying it heralded a new phase in relations between the two countries.

Although no details of the protocol were made public, it was understood to cover the provision of spare parts for Egypt's Soviet-supplied MIG fighters. China has already supplied Cairo free of charge with 30 jet engines and other parts.

[United States Air Force officials said China would apparently supply spare parts for Egypt's MIG-17 and MIG-21 squadrons, planes common to both countries' forces, but probably not for the more advanced MIG-23's, which the Chinese do not have.]

Cooperation Is Toasted

At a dinner, both sides drank a toast to the closer cooperation that has developed since Cairo scrapped its friendship treaty with the Soviet Union last month.

The signing of the protocol came at the end of a visit by Vice President Husni Mubarak, the highest ranking Egyptian to travel to Peking.

Egyptian sources said the protocol had been signed by a Chinese Deputy Chief of Staff, Chang Tsai-chien, and Egypt's Minister of State for War Production, Gama'eladdin Sedki.

Mr. Mubarak, who yesterday met with Chairman Mao Tse-tung, today had three and a half hours of talks with Prime Minister Hua Kuo-feng.

The Soviet-Egyptian rift has been greeted with thinly disguised delight here, and Mr. Mubarak's 36-member delegation has received an unusually lavish welcome.

A Boycotted Banquet

The Soviet ambassador and six Soviet-bloc envoys boycotted a banquet for the Vice President on Monday.

Tonight the Egyptians held a farewell dinner but restricted it to Chinese guests. This seemed to be a maneuver to prevent another snub by the Soviet bloc.

Beaming warmly, Mr. Hua and Mr. Mubarak raised their glasses to toast what the Vice President described as "the great push forward" in Chinese-Egyptian relations.

Mr. Hua said in his speech that the Egyptian struggle against aggression and hegemonism—Peking's term for Soviet expansionism—had "met with sympathy and wide support from the people of the world."

Vice President Mubarak praised China's backing for the Egyptian people.

"Relations between the two countries have had a great new push forward and I am fully confident about their growth," he said.

TOP OIL EXECUTIVE IN ITALY IS SHOT

Attack Linked to Terrorist Acts Designed to Intensify Rome's Political Crisis

By ALVIN SHUSTER
Special to The New York Times

ROME, April 21—One of Italy's leading oil executives was shot and seriously wounded today in an attack that underscored the rising level of political violence here.

Giovanni Theodoli, the 51-year-old president of the Italian Oil Producers Association and president of Chevron Oil Italiana, was attacked in his car as he drove to his office. Later, in a call to a newspaper, an extreme left-wing group, terming itself the "Armed Communist Unit" asserted that it was responsible for the shooting.

The incident was the latest among the acts of political violence that are generating social tensions on top of Italy's governmental troubles and monetary crisis. The acts have intensified in recent days with the increasing prospect of national elections this summer.

There was no explanation from the "Communist Unit" for the assault on Mr. Theodoli, who, as a member of an aristocratic family, has the title of marquis. But oil companies have been in the news here lately, most recently with the revelations last week of the payments to political parties by British Petroleum and Royal Dutch/Shell from 1968 to 1973.

The association headed by Mr. Theodoli includes all the major oil companies operating in Italy. He took over the job two years ago after the resignation of Vincenzo Cazzaniga, then head of Esso Italiana, who figured prominently in scandals involving oil company payoffs to Italian parties.

In the telephone call to the newspaper today, the "Communist unit" also asserted respon-

PITTSBURGH, April 21—Jimmy Carter has entered the second phase of the Presidential campaign in the anomalous position of a front-runner still searching for a solid base in the Democratic Party.

For the hands-down winner of the first phase in the long nomination race the perils of the second phase are wide: target in Pennsylvania—a state where primary politics looks more like a convention than a popularity contest and where the power blocs that like to run Democratic conventions stand shoulder to shoulder against Mr. Carter.

Pennsylvania presents an arena of blue-collar, ethnic politics and massive city and state patronage machines. It is a state where organized labor can put 10,000 election workers in the field next Tuesday. This

A Slower Rate of Inflation and Greater Corporate Profit Reports Pushed Stock Prices to Their Highest Level in Nearly 39 Months

By JAMES M. NAUGHTON
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 21—President Ford accused Ronald Reagan today of making "preposterous" and "demagogic" statements that the United States was slipping behind the Soviet Union in military preparedness.

"Recent charges that the United States is in a position of military inferiority, and that we have accepted Soviet world domination are complete and utter nonsense," the President said in an address to the 85th annual Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Mr. Reagan, meanwhile, bore down hard again today with his assertion of a declining United States military posture as he campaigned in Georgia. [Page 25.]

Mr. Ford suggested that the former California Governor, who is challenging him for the Republican Presidential nomination, had seized on the defense issue "because a grab bag of other issues has been tried and failed."

The subject is too grave, Mr. Ford contended, for debate on it to be "cast in exaggerated rhetoric" and based on "oversimplifications." He told a re-

He Says Statement U.S. Is Slipping Behind Soviet in Defense Is 'Demagogic'

By JOSEPH F. SULLIVAN
Special to The New York Times

TRENTON, April 21—Governor Byrne said today that he did not believe the State Senate would pass the graduated state income tax until the New Jersey Supreme Court delineated exactly what it would do to finance public schools in the event of inaction by the Legislature.

Mr. Byrne's pessimism over the fate of the tax measure, expressed at his weekly news conference, was the first time that he had indicated he believed the tax bill was in trouble.

The Legislature is under court mandate to change the system of financial aid to the public schools, and has already enacted a measure that sets new school standards and contains a new school-aid formula.

The "thorough and efficient" school law will cost $378 million to finance, and this is supposed to be paid for by the $900 million income tax bill, which also is designed to provide some local property tax relief.

The State Supreme Court has

Increase for First Quarter Lowest for a 3-Month Period Since June '72

FOOD ITEMS DROP AGAIN

Metropolitan Area Costs Up for Medical Care, Housing and Transportation

By EDWIN L. DALE Jr.
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 21—The nation's much slower inflation pace continued in March with a rise in the Consumer Price Index of only two-tenths of 1 percent, the Labor Department reported today.

The increase was twice that of February, when the seasonally adjusted rise was only one-tenth of 1 percent, but considerably better than the increase of four-tenths of 1 percent in January.

The rise in consumer prices for the first quarter of 1976—at an annual rate of 2.9 percent—is the lowest quarterly rise since the three months that ended June 30, 1972, when wage and price controls were in effect. By contrast, at the peak of the inflation in the third quarter of 1974, prices were going up at an annual rate of 13.4 percent.

In the New York-northeastern New Jersey area, consumer prices increased two-tenths of 1 percent in March, with rises noted in transportation, medical care and housing. [Page 39.]

Food Prices Fall

Last month, once again, falling food prices played a key role in holding down the inflation rate, and gasoline prices also dipped. But those trends are unlikely to continue, meaning that the index will probably go up more in the months ahead than it did in February and March.

That point was emphasized today by Ron Nessen, the White House press secretary. While saying that President Ford viewed the March figures as "excellent news," Mr. Nessen quickly added that "no one here believes it will be possible to maintain this low a level" of monthly increases.

The rise in the Consumer Price Index in March was two-tenths of 1 percent both before and after adjustment for normal

Spain Lends 8 Goyas for Bicentennial

By LINDA CHARLTON
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 21—Eight paintings by the Spanish painter Francisco de Goya, including the famous "Majas," will go on exhibition at the National Gallery of Art early next month, a loan from the Spanish Government to honor the United States Bicentennial.

The exhibition, which is expected to last about a month, also serves as an overture for the state visit of Spain's King and Queen, Juan Carlos I and Sofia, who will begin their stay in the United States in Washington on June 2. The exhibition is expected to remain for about a month.

Of the eight paintings, only the two "Majas"—two portraits of the same woman in an identical pose, one naked and the other clothed—have ever before left Spain. These two paintings were shown at the 1939 World's Fair. They are also the best-known of the group, partly because nudes are rare in Spanish painting—this is Goya's only nude—and partly because of the romantic legend attached to them.

Although the face of the woman shown in the two paintings does not resemble that of the Duchess of Alba in portraits, it is known that Goya was in love with this spirited and beautiful aristocrat. From this has arisen the legend, which has been current since the mid-19th century, that she was posing naked for her lover when Goya heard that her husband wanted to see the picture. To placate the duke, so this romance goes, he quickly painted a clothed version and hid the original. According to a dictionary, "maja" is a "Spanish belle of the lower classes."

The other six paintings, according to the gallery, were carefully chosen to show the full range and variety of Goya's work. The earliest dates from 1779; the latest, from his final "black" period, from 1822.

British Press Assails Callaghan for Shunning Queen's P.

By BERNARD WEINRAUB
Special to The New York Times

LONDON, April 21—Prime Minister James Callaghan's decision to turn down a personal invitation from Queen Elizabeth II to attend her 50th birthday party last night stirred an uproar today in the British press.

Amid lavish praise for the Queen—even in the left-wing newspapers—Mr. Callaghan was criticized in the press for having snubbed her. "Certainly no Prime Minister has ever acted in this way before," said The Daily Mail, a Conservative paper.

A spokesman for Mr. Callaghan explained that he was new in the job of Prime Minister and wanted to spend the night "reading himself in" on his farm in Sussex. Other officials said that Mr. Callaghan had never been known as a late-night reveler, and last night's party at Windsor Castle for 500 guests did not begin until 11:30 P.M., after a smaller, private dinner party.

Another reason offered was that Mr. Callaghan was reluctant to appear amid the waltzes and champagne of the castle's ballroom while trying to persuade trade unions to accept minimal wage increases.

Private Meeting Planned
A spokesman for the Queen had said that she "understands perfectly well that the Prime Minister is unable to attend."

The spokesman said that Mr. Callaghan would dine privately with her next week, and they would have "much more time to talk."

Queen Elizabeth enjoys birthday gift from Sir John Smyth, president of the Victoria Cross and George Cross Associations, at Windsor Castle. She became 50 yesterday.

"The idea of a Prime Minister turning down the Queen's P.M."

The headline in The Express today was: "Callaghan Regrets." And The Mail said: "It looks like Mr. Callaghan has badly, and there is widespread criticism of his invitation from the palace for a private party, it has been regarded as a that is just not true."

A Torment of P.M.
The Queen's 50th birthday party prompted a torrent of criticism from the press for her and under the attitude of the press Queen Elizabeth.

Even The Guardian takes a left-wing slant. "This cannot be an irreverent and ally ribald over a reign. No excess of diatribe would offend the spirit of the Queen's office. Queen Elizabeth has found the balance."

Prominent among the guests at the party were Lord and Princess Margaret and Princess Anne, who have recently taken the rest of the royal family's numerous guests who are the Queen's interest in horsemanship and racing.

"Where was Big Jim, Premier, for only 15 days?" asked The Sun, a popular morning tabloid.

Palestinians Move Into Key Beirut Areas

By JAMES M. MARKHAM
Special to The New York Times

BEIRUT, Lebanon, April 21—Units of the Palestine Liberation Army began taking up tentative positions in Beirut today, but a two-day cease-fire was widely disregarded.

Fighting continued in the battered port quarter, where leftists have been trying to take the Fattal building, which dominates the area, and at least 15 persons were said to have been killed and 30 wounded during the day. President Salehman Franjeh, who has resigned widespread demands that he step down, sent envoys to Damascus to obtain what the Christian rightists said were "clarifications" on the agreements reached last week between the Syrian Government and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The right-wing Phalangist faction reported that the Christian town of Zahlé, which lies in the Bekaa Valley, had been shelled and that 16 people had been killed. The report could not be confirmed.

Palestinian informants said that Gerald Utting, a Canadian journalist from The Toronto Star, was alive after having been taken from his taxi yesterday by Palestinian security forces.

One P.L.O. informant said that a "misunderstanding" had led to the detention of Mr. Utting, who was on his way to the Beirut airport after a reporting trip of about 10 days. The informant said the journalist would shortly be released.

Palestine Liberation Army units have been stationed near the national museum for two days, and today small sounds were said to be establishing footholds in the embattled eastern suburbs of Chiyah and Ain el Rummaneh and in the shattered seaport hotel district.

But shelling and sniping continued intermittently much of the day, and the 28th cease-fire of the year-old civil war looked no more promising than those that preceded it.

Arabs and Israeli Troops Clash On the West Bank for 4th Day

JERUSALEM, April 21 (UPI)—Sporadic demonstrations against Jewish settlements on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River flared up today in a fourth day of clashes between Israeli troops and mobs of rock-throwing Arabs.

Soldiers in East Jerusalem broke up small crowds of high-school girls who set up barricades of rocks and burning tires outside three schools in the Arab section of the city.

Policemen later dispersed girls who set tires on fire outside the New Gate in the walls around the Old City and started a protest march from Al Aksa mosque.

Businessmen closed their shops in Tulkarm, fifth largest city in the territory captured from Jordan in the 1967 war. Occupation authorities imposed a curfew on the center of town and a nearby refugee camp after crowds roamed the streets and set up barricades across main roads.

The demonstrations were a response to a march by 20,000 Israelis to dramatize their claim to the West Bank. One Arab has been killed and five wounded in confrontations with Israeli troops this week.

The New York Times/April 22, 1976
Jidda is having second thoughts about growth.

By ERIC PACE
Special to The New York Times
JIDDA. Saudi Arabia—Moslem idealists denounce Western notions of progress. Local journalists complain about inadequate sewerage facilities. Builders call for better planning and a return to the modest mud brick construction of the Arabian past.

This sweltering Red Sea boom town, Saudi Arabia's main gateway for Western technology, luxuries and ideas, is showing signs of disenchantment with its reckless growth and a growing concern for the quality of life.

"Certain Western customs have been adopted in this country, the most dangerous of which are irresponsibility and carelessness," the daily newspaper per Al Medina charged in a much-quoted editorial. "Our biggest problem today is how people live."

Such second thoughts about the impact of Saudi Arabia's oil boom are heard far more frequently here than they were a year ago, when the Saudis were dazed by the shock of King Faisal's assassination, and when the boom's painful side effects were less clear.

These doubts, reservations and resentments are more complex than the old antipathy to Western ways that is part of Saudi Arabia's puritanical Islamic heritage and some modern Saudis are already seeking out ways to use some of the country's vast wealth—more than $25 billion in oil revenue this year.

Symptoms of the wealth and the problems are everywhere.

Behind the gleaming new office buildings on Jidda's main streets are dusty lanes where laborers splash water from tins. The city's water supply has already become inadequate for its needs.

The fine new streets the city has acquired are more, and more frequently jammed now with newly imported cars, many with shipping stickers still on their windows. Yet miles of back streets remain littered and unpaved because municipal services have not kept pace with the upsurge in Saudi revenues since oil prices began their swift rise late in 1973.

Luxury and Inefficiency
The newspapers advertise such luxury items as Christian Dior shoes, Dutch cream, French paté and perfumes—but they also record the city's woes: power failures, deficient bus service and shortages of building materials.

Journalists from a local newspaper, Okaz, and from the national news agency voiced criticism of Jidda's sewers at a news conference called here recently by one of the city's biggest builders, Ghath Pharaon.

He said that the problem was that "there is no one universal plan for electricity, sewage, water and telephone operations in the city."

Drawn by the oil wealth, an influx of foreign workers has helped to swell the city's population to over 500,000 and its facilities have been further strained by widespread new construction.

Steps Being Taken
But the national and local governments, and many private citizens have already suggested or begun measures that are expected to improve the Jidda environment.

Prince Majed Ibn Abdul Aziz, the Minister of Municipal and Rural Affairs, last week commissioned a two-year, $65 million project to beautify Jidda, where dilapidated old Arabesque townhouses contrast with ungainly modern buildings put up 20 years ago.

Mr. Pharaon reported that his family's company alone was carrying out $300 million worth of water and sewage facility construction in Jidda and in neighboring Mecca.

In addition, Jidda's water supply is to be increased by the digging of new wells as well as the expansion of desalting facilities. And there is talk of adding public transportation to ease the traffic in the city's center.

Private builders and architects are also advocating ways of making the city's new construction more efficient, more graceful and more economic. Their solutions range from the importing of prefabricated housing to the revival of mud brick, the humble building material with which Arabian builders in years gone by built even great fortresses.

Skirts? Pants?

Don't think either/or. Think both/and.

This is the way to swing into summer: showing your pretty legs, taking it easy and breezy. No need to get caught up in any clothes-conundrums. "Are pants out? Are skirts in?"

Just relax. Here's what's right, right on this page. All these new, softened up shapes in new, lightened up colors (like white, eggshell and pale khaki) are from a very good company called Elyse. And we've put them in the paper to give you a very good idea of the big collections of happy-summer separates you'll find in the shop called "Skirts and Tops" on our third floor.

Everything here is for sizes 8 to 14 in polyester and cotton. And even our prices are soft and easy.

The full-flared culotte skirt with fly front and side pockets. White or tan poplin. 33.00

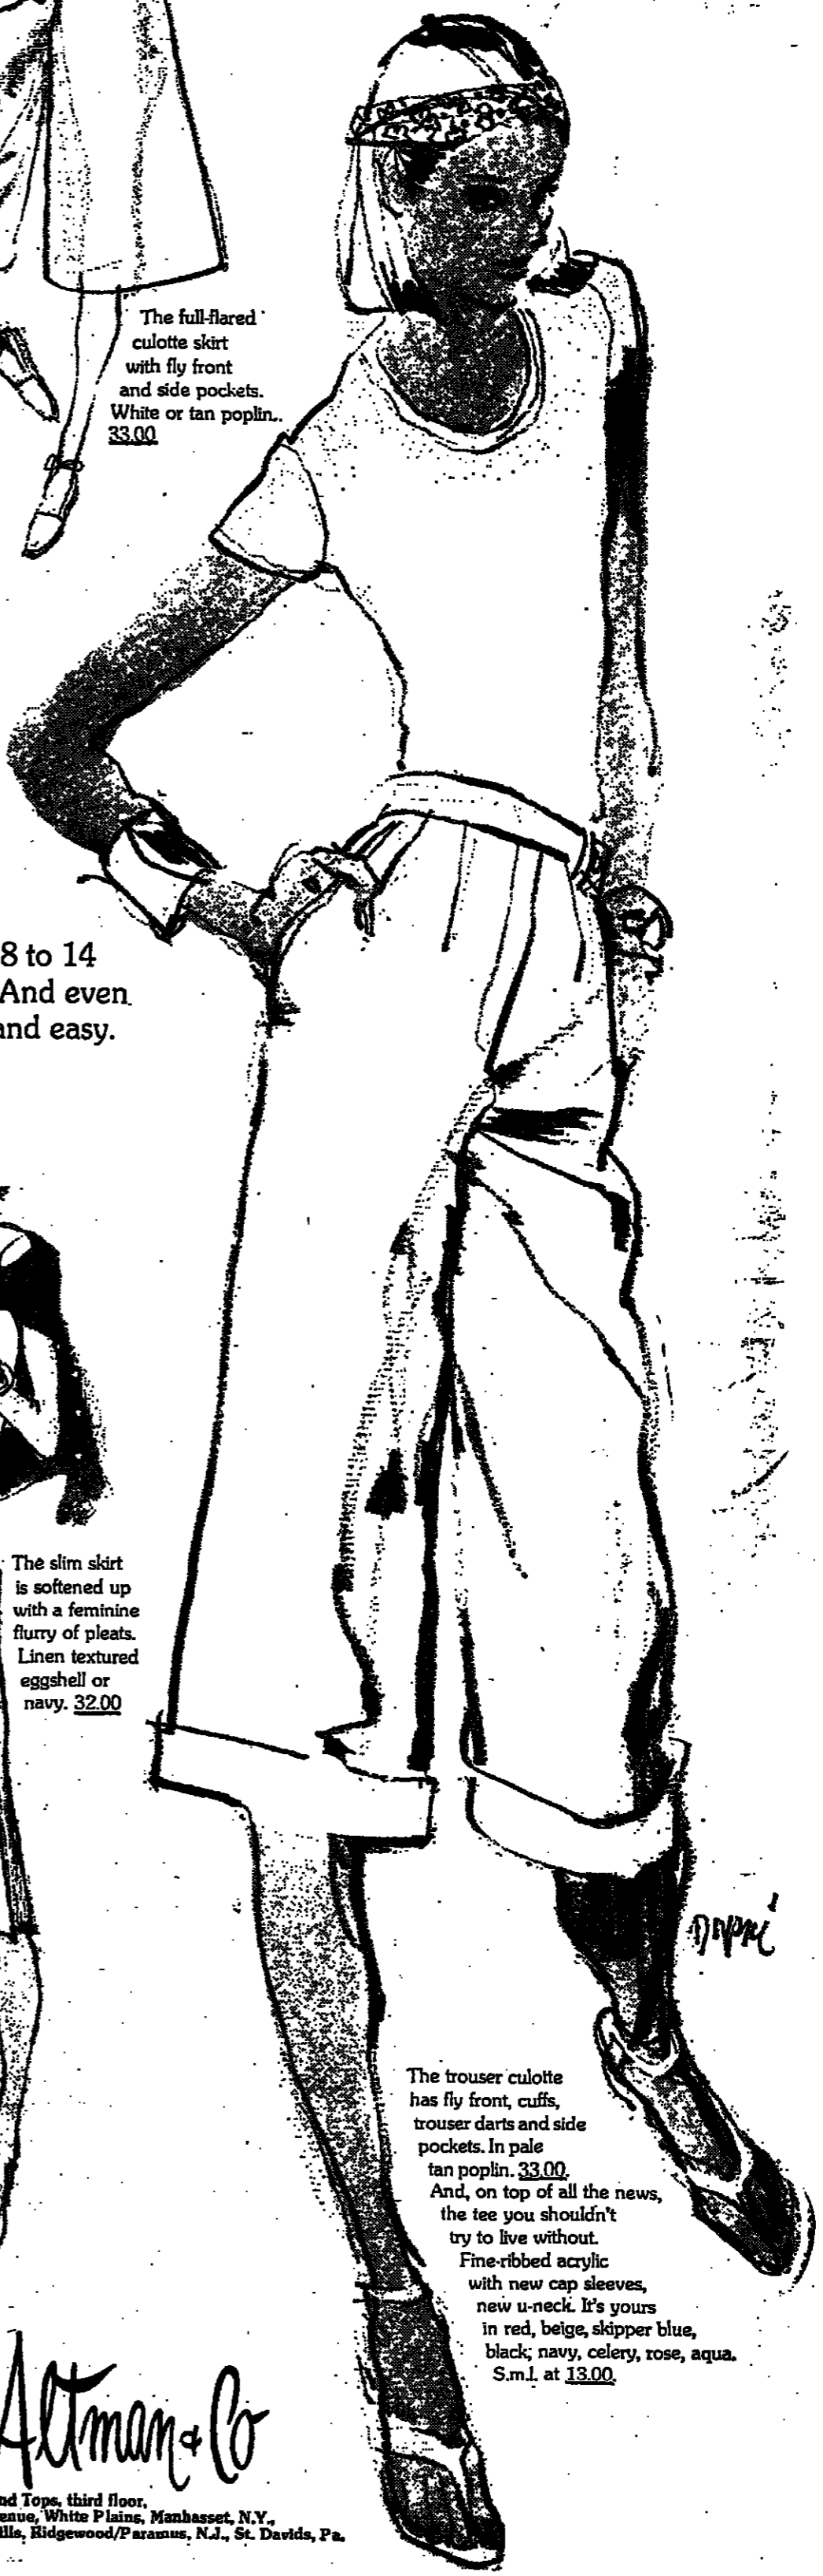

The back-wrap skirt with soft front pleats, two pockets. White or tan poplin. 32.00

The soft-all-around skirt has elasticized, tied sides and two pockets. Tan or white poplin. 28.00

The slim skirt is softened up with a feminine flurry of pleats. Linen textured eggshell or navy. 32.00

The trouser culotte has fly front, cuffs, trouser darts and side pockets. In pale tan poplin. 33.00

And, on top of all the news, the tee you shouldn't try to live without. Fine-ribbed acrylic with new cap sleeves, new u-neck. It's yours in red, beige, skipper blue, black, navy, celery, rose, aqua. S.m.l. at 13.00.

U.S. OPPOSES TALKS ON INDIAN OCEAN

Senator Reports Rebuff to Congressional Plea

WASHINGTON, April 21 (AP)—Senator John C. Culver, Democrat of Iowa, said today that the State Department had rejected a Congressional plea for an attempt to negotiate with Moscow for restraint in naval deployments in the Indian Ocean.

Senator Culver made public a State Department report that "any such initiative would be inappropriate now."

Referring to the Soviet Union's activities in Angola and buildup of facilities in Somalia, the report said: "An arms-limitation initiative at this time in a region immediately contiguous to the African continent might convey the mistaken impression to the Soviets and our friends and allies that we were willing to acquiesce in this type of Soviet behavior."

Senator Culver sponsored an amendment to the military construction bill last year that deferred until this April 15 the use of funds to continue expansion of the American naval base on the British-owned island of Diego Garcia in the Indian Ocean.

Mr. Culver said that the intent of the amendment was to allow time for an approach to Moscow on the possibility of an arms-limitation agreement for the Indian Ocean. The conference committee for the bill had called for a progress report by April 15.

The Senator said that the report sent to him April 15 by Assistant Secretary of State Robert J. McCloskey was "a curt rejection of the Congressional request."

The report said that naval deployments by both the United States and the Soviet Union had "remained relatively stable" over the last two years. The United States, it said, "will continue a policy of restraint" and hopes the Soviet Union will do likewise.

It said that the United States had no intention of proceeding beyond the improvement of fleet-support facilities at Diego Garcia and that there is no intention "to increase our naval deployments to the area."

4-Party Coalition Officially Named By Thailand's King

Special to The New York Times
BANGKOK, Thailand, April 21—King Phumiphol Aduldet today signed a proclamation appointing a new Government led by 70-year-old Seni Pramoj.

The Prime Minister presides over a four-party coalition that won control of 206 of the 279 seats in the House of Representatives in a general election on April 4. Although this large majority should guarantee the Government greater stability than its predecessor, serious internal conflicts and divisions seem almost certain to develop.

The new Government was formed during two weeks of bargaining between the Democrats, Thai Nation, Social Justice and Social Nationalist Parties.

The Democrats, who emerged from the election as by far the strongest party, with 115 seats, including all 28 seats in Bangkok, took over half of the 30 Cabinet posts.

The Government's formation was greeted with relief and with the hope that a measure of calm could be restored after the political turbulence that had shaken Thailand in the two and a half years since the end of military rule.

The new administration, which is strongly conservative and business-oriented, is expected to pursue pro-Western policies that could encourage a return of foreign investors after a year in which the Communist victories in neighboring Indochina and domestic political unrest virtually crippled the Thai investment climate.

Envoy to Lebanon, Ailing, Being Replaced by Ford

WASHINGTON, April 21 (AP)—President Ford today announced the resignation of G. McMurtre Godley as ambassador to Lebanon and said he was nominating Francis E. Meloy Jr. as his successor.

Mr. Godley has been in ill health and recently underwent surgery. Mr. Meloy, 59 years old, has been ambassador to Guatemala since December 1973. Before that he was ambassador to the Dominican Republic and deputy chief of mission in Rome.

WASHINGTON, April 21 (Reuters)—President Ford today nominated John Reed, chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, as ambassador to Sri Lanka and the Maldives. He would succeed Christopher van Hollen, who has resigned.

Soviet Test Blast Recorded
UPPSALA, Sweden, April 21 (AP)—A underground explosion in the 100-kiloton range was recorded today from the Soviet Union's nuclear testing area in Siberia, the Uppsala seismological institution reported. The explosion registered 6.2 on the Richter Scale, the institution reported.

Kunming Is Found in Ferment By Reporters Touring China

KUNMING, China, April 21 (Reuters)—China's political unrest led to violence in Yunnan Province, according to wall posters here attacking local leaders.

The propaganda campaign included allegations that a man had been killed in one of three incidents in the last two weeks.

Buildings in Kunming, the provincial capital, are plastered with thousands of posters and black-painted slogans accusing Chia Chi-yun, the provincial leader, and his aides of being followers of Teng Hsiao-ping.

Mr. Teng, the once-powerful senior Deputy Prime Minister, was branded a right-wing "capitalist roader" and dismissed from office on April 7.

Foreign correspondents paying a rare week-long visit to Kunming found the city in political ferment. Guides told them it might not be safe to copy big-character posters in the streets.

Incident at a School One poster referred to a man killed in a clash at a town outside Kunming on April 6. Others spoke of incidents at the city's Middle School 1 and at a rally to celebrate Mr. Teng's dismissal.

All three events appeared to have occurred shortly after the riots on April 5 in Peking's Tian An Men Square, which the authorities blamed on pro-Teng forces.

Posters at a department store here described Mr. Chia as Mr. Teng's representative in Yunnan. Officials said Mr. Chia was still in office and there were signs he was fighting back against his critics: Photographs in a street showcase showed him addressing a mass rally denouncing Mr. Teng.

In a departure from normal practice, the correspondents were not introduced to leading provincial officials.

One official said that although Mr. Chia was being linked with Mr. Teng, "the facts may not be so."

At a Kunming machine tools plant, a party official said some factory officials had been adversely influenced and a controversial debate had reopened over material incentives for workers.

Some officials pressed for incentive, but the idea was quashed by the revolutionary zeal of the workers, the party official said.

5 IN CANADA FACING CHARGES OF FRAUD

OTTAWA, April 21 (Reuters)—Five men, including a Canadian senator and the president of the National Hockey League, will be formally charged later this week with conspiracy over a shop lease at Montreal's Dorval Airport, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police said today.

The police swore out charges against the five men before a justice of the peace here last night.

Earlier it was incorrectly reported that the five men had already been formally charged.

The police, in filing the charges, said the hockey official, Clarence Campbell, and three other former officers of Sky Shops Export Ltd. in 1972 gave Senator Louis Giguere, a Liberal, $95,000 to obtain an extension to a lease for the company's duty-free shop at the airport.

The three former Sky Shops officers also to be charged were Louis Lapointe, chairman; Gordon G. Brown, vice president, and James Lavery, treasurer.

William W. Wirtz, chairman of the National Hockey League's board of governors, issued the following statement yesterday:

"Following the report of the allegation against Mr. Campbell, we canvassed the member N.H.L. teams. We are unanimous of our support of Mr. Campbell and stand behind him 100 percent."

Issue and Debate

Western Countries Wonder What a Sharing of Rule With Communists Would Mean

By BERNARD GWERTZMAN

WASHINGTON, April 21—Italian political leaders are holding consultations that are expected to result in a decision by President Giovanni Leone to dissolve Parliament later this month and hold new general elections in June.

At a time when Italy is in another economic crisis, and political polls of the last two years have shown a trend toward the Communists, the election will inevitably focus world attention on strategic Italy, just as in 1948, the last time Italian Communists were believed to be coming close to assuming power.

Even in advance of a formal decision to hold new elections, the issue of Communist participation—or dominance—in democratic governments has spawned a lively discussion here and in Europe.

It has even been raised in the context of the American Presidential campaign. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, alarmed at the prospect that the Italian Communist party in Western Europe, could assume a major share of the government, has warned that such a development could touch off a series of "falling dominoes" over a period of 5 to 10 years in which one allied country after another moved toward communism, or at best, neutralism.

But some of Mr. Kissinger's Democratic critics believe that he is being overly gloomy; likewise, some European leaders such as Chancellor Helmut Schmidt of West Germany suggest that Mr. Kissinger would do better to mute his concern.

Certainly the advent of Communists to power in Italy would have immediate repercussions on the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. It would raise questions in neighboring France, where a Socialist-Communist alliance has garnered about half the votes, and would inevitably suggest to many that detente with the Russians was giving Communists the cover to move into areas of influence that were barred to them during more contentious cold-war days.

But optimists believe that as long as Communists are part of a free electoral system, the system is likely to prevail and the Communists will have to adapt to freedom, not the other way around.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, alarmed at the prospect that the Italian Communist party in Western Europe, could assume a major share of the government, has warned that such a development could touch off a series of "falling dominoes" over a period of 5 to 10 years in which one allied country after another moved toward communism, or at best, neutralism.

while it should be loyal to Moscow, in Italy the party had to come to power by constitutional means and had to follow its own model. The Communists were part of the first government after World War II, and made a major effort in 1948 to capture the first election under the new Constitution. But in that historic election, the Christian Democrats, aided by dramatic American aid, open and secret, swept to office under the leadership of Alcide de Gaspari.

Since 1948, the Communists, while winning control of many regions, have been kept out of the national government. At first, the Christian Democrats were able to rule through a series of centrist governments; in the early 1960's, Amintore Fanfani began to depend on Socialist Party help.

But the Socialists, who themselves have had pretensions to power, have more recently broken with the Christian Democrats and seem more interested in seeking the best bargain they can get with the Communists.

Recent political polls have consistently shown the Communists and Socialists collecting about 51 percent of the popular vote. The Christian Democrats, who have given the impression of a tired, ineffectual party, divided among the various factions, have not inspired confidence in Italy or abroad.

The Communists, on the other hand, have given the impression of being more dynamic, more ably led, and more competent to deal with the crisis. And to ease apprehensions, they have pledged that if in power they would not break Italy's ties to NATO or the Common Market.

The Atlantic alliance was created in 1948-49 in response to fears of Soviet aggression in Western Europe. Italy has always been a key member because of its strategic position on the Mediterranean.

For 15 years American officials have been concerned about the leftward trend in Italian politics, and have wondered what effect the advent of the Communists, even to a share of power, would have on such countries as France, where the awkward Communist-Socialist alliance has polled about half the popular vote although the overall Communist proportion of the total vote has never been much above 20 percent. In Italy the Communist share has been 33 percent. The French Socialists have been stronger than the Italian ones.

tably weaken because the American people, while accepting a special relationship now to Western Europe, would question going to war over an alliance in which some country or countries were perceived as "Communist," the fact that the Italian and French Communists claim they are "independent" of Moscow counts for little because they would have no chance of being elected to office unless they took such a position.

In his more gloomy moments, Mr. Kissinger sees acquiescence on Communism in Italy being followed over a period of 10 years in such countries as Portugal, Spain, France and Greece. Behind his warnings is the view that if he did not speak out forcefully against acceptance of the Communists, many Italians might vote for them without thinking of long-range danger.

By keeping up an attack on Communist entry into the government, Mr. Kissinger also believes he encourages other anti-Communists in Europe who look to the United States for support. As for relations with the Soviet Union, Mr. Kissinger has argued that the balance of power would collapse if the Russians perceived that the West was so weakened that Communist parties were able to come to power.

gestions that if Italy allows Communists into the Government, it will begin a process of dismantling NATO. This unhappiness with Mr. Kissinger's analysis stems, in part, from the recent experience in Portugal where despite similar expressions of gloom from Mr. Kissinger about a takeover, the Communists were turned back. This was the result largely of efforts by West European Socialists to help the Portuguese Socialists.

At a recent convention here, a panel of three Democratic experts also disagreed with Mr. Kissinger's implied threat that if the Communists come to power in Italy, the United States should have nothing to do with Italy. While Communists in Italian ruling circles would be unwelcome, they said, the United States must prepare for such an eventuality and use its influence to insure that Italy remains part of the alliance and does not slip away.

Chancellor Schmidt, who argues that there should not be a fear of the Communists, believes it does no good to dramatize the Italian situation, which he does not expect to spread to other countries automatically. He seems to argue that the West Europeans can handle the new situation and that Mr. Kissinger has given a sense of hysteria to the prospect of Communists taking office.

The Russians, eager to gain a propaganda point or two, have also accused Mr. Kissinger of interfering in Italy's domestic affairs in violation of the Helsinki accord. Moscow, which the West often accuses of dominating the East Europeans, rarely misses an opportunity to return the compliment. But on a more serious basis, the Russians seem ambivalent about a Communist takeover, not sure what effect it would have on the rest of NATO.

It would raise the risk of destabilization in Europe and a possible increase in tensions. This might hurt Moscow's long-term of avoiding a conflict.

Outlook

The debate on Co in Western Europe time for a long time. An election is held in June—with early indications Mr. Kissinger's way any effect. Should Communists win more percent of the vote, be considered a showing and press rise for their part in the government. Christian Democrats of less than 33 percent be seen as a sign Communist sentiment. But the argument time on what such really means, for agree that the Communists are different. Communists in the bloc; and a vote does not necessarily mean more than critical chaos in Italy today.

Background

The problem in discussing the role of Communists in Italy—and to a lesser extent in France—has been that the style of communism preached and practiced in Western Europe usually differs from the Soviet model. The major figure of Italian communism was Palmiro Togliatti, who preached that

Administration View

Mr. Kissinger has made no secret of his view that every effort must be expended to prevent the Communists from coming to power in Italy. In the past, the Central Intelligence Agency has supplied some funds. But at present, the American role seems limited to warnings, and mostly by Mr. Kissinger. In his public and private remarks, Mr. Kissinger has made the following points: If the Communists had a major share in any NATO government, that government's loyalty to the alliance in case of a crisis with the Soviet Union would have to be questioned; American support for NATO would inevi-

Opposing View

Except for the Communists themselves, few in the West look happily on the possibility of Communists holding national office in Italy or anywhere else. But Mr. Kissinger's critics seem to believe that in stressing his opposition to what they see as probably inevitable, he will only dramatize unnecessarily the setback for the West when it comes. They also do not share his "domino theory" of disaster. Many West Europeans seem unhappy with the sug-

A Leading Oil Executive in Italy Is Shot

Police officials said today, however, that they were still investigating the connection between the fire and shooting and were not ready to ascribe the blame to any particular extremist group.

There are a number of such extremist groups in Italy, including the urban guerrilla unit called "Red Brigades." They are far to the left of the Communist Party, which has been among the political parties condemning the recent wave of violence.

The most serious incidents have included arson at plants owned by Fiat, the automobile company that is Italy's largest private employer. A candy factory, supermarket warehouses, schools and offices of the carabinieri, Italy's paramilitary police, have been among the targets.

Aim of Attacks Analyzed "These attacks clearly reveal a preordered subversive plan to disturb public opinion that is already preoccupied by the serious economic and political situation," said Benigno Zaccagnini, the party secretary of the Christian Democrats, which form the Government. He added that "law and order" was now a crucial issue.

The prospect of more attacks was so acute that workers in some factories gave up time over the Easter weekend to act as vigilantes in the north of Italy. One Communist union leader said that the attacks were designed to throw suspicion on the workers, introducing divisions with their ranks.

The violence continued, however, with fire-bombings against carabinieri headquarters in Massa in the north, Bari in the south, and in Rome. A warehouse for newsprint was also attacked during the Easter holiday.

The incidents have been particularly dramatic because of the economic and political crises, which involve a sinking lira and a Government that may be forced to resign soon and make way for elections this June, a year ahead of schedule. An Italian magazine asked: "How many more fires before June 13?"—a possible date for the voting.

Outcome of Talks Awaited The timetable for elections awaits the outcome of negotiations now under way between Mr. Zaccagnini and the leaders of all the major parties, including the Communists. The Christian Democratic leader is trying to work out an agreement on proposals dealing with the economy and abortion reform as a way of reconciling differences and avoiding the Government's collapse.

38 Killed, 43 Hurt as Train Hits School Bus in Taiwan

TAIPEI, Taiwan, April 21 (UPI)—A train crashed into a bus crowded with children in central Taiwan today, killing at least 38 persons and injuring 43, the police reported.

It was the country's worst traffic accident since World War II.

A police officer at Ta Cheng, a village near Changhua, said that most of the casualties were junior high school students aged 13 to 15. The injured persons are in "serious to critical condition," he said, and "at least half of them are not expected to survive."

Most politicians think that the effort will fail and that the vote will be held in June. The Communist Party, Italy's second largest, could emerge from the elections with an increased share of the vote and an enhanced strength to demand seats in the Cabinet.

If the present talks do fail, most politicians expect one of the most violent campaigns in years, given the clear warnings from the extremist groups. The shooting today served to intensify the fears.

Mr. Theodoli, whose car was stopped by another carrying a man and a woman, has long been associated with the oil industry. He started in Italy with the American oil company, Caltex, worked in the United States, and became president of Chevron here nearly 10 years ago.

Dividing Line on Cyprus Growing Rigid, but Two Sides Adjust

By STEVEN V. ROBERTS
Special to The New York Times

NICOSIA, Cyprus — As a factory worker in the Turkish city of Izmir, Hassan Keklik was dissatisfied with his low wages and hard life. When he came to Cyprus as a tourist, he liked the warm climate and friendly people and decided to settle here.

Turkish Cypriot authorities gave Mr. Keklik a rent-free house outside Famagusta that had been abandoned by Greek Cypriot refugees. He could not find a job, but he started an appliance-repair business in his house and hopes to open his own shop.

Yamakis Vallandis was one of the Greek Cypriots who fled Famagusta during the Turkish invasion in 1974 and then moved into a tent camp for refugees. In March that camp was pulled down, and the Vallandis family was transferred to the village of Aradhippon, where 1,050 new cement-block houses have been built by the Cyprus Government.

The former carpenter now sells groceries next to his house, and like Mr. Keklik he hopes to have his own shop. Three of his four children no longer remember their home in Famagusta, and Mr. Vallandis doubts they will ever move back.

Experts No Solution

"There is not going to be any solution," he said wearily. "Famagusta is the most beautiful place on Cyprus. The Turks are not going to give it back."

Twenty-one months after the Turkish invasion, the line dividing Cyprus is more rigid than ever. While five rounds of political talks have failed to make noticeable progress, the Turkish side has been expanding and strengthening its control over the northern 40 percent of the island.

On the Greek side, more and more refugees are realizing that they might never see their old homes again. The raging anger and frustration they felt a year ago has subsided to a dull throb. Like Mr. Vallandis, many of them are building new lives in new places.

Before 1974, the Turkish Cypriots felt that their position was inferior to that of the Greek Cypriots, and now they are determined to establish their political and economic independence. As Rauf Denktaş, the leader of the ethnic Turks, said in a recent interview:

Yamakis Vallandis, Greek Cypriot who fled Famagusta in 1974, now sells groceries next to his house in village of Aradhippon. He worked as a carpenter in Famagusta.

"In the past, the Turks were exploited by the Greeks, laughed at by the Greeks. Now, for the first time, we have the feeling that we are masters of our own fate, that we are free to develop ourselves in all fields."

The Turks have now stepped up their campaign to expel the Greek Cypriots remaining in the north and to create a purely Turkish state. Only about 8,000 Greeks are left in the area, mostly in the remote Karpas Peninsula, and their numbers are dwindling daily.

Estimated 15,000 Newcomers
The Turkish tactic, diplomatic sources report, is to call in the leaders of an ethnic Greek community and give them a choice: Leave immediately and take nothing with you, or sign an official request to leave and take your belongings. Once the leaders yield to this pressure, the rest usually follow, and the Turks can say that everyone left voluntarily.

The ethnic Turks were only 20 percent of Cyprus before the invasion, and afterward they found themselves with far more land than they could colonize. Accordingly, the Denktaş administration has been encouraging families like the Kekliks to immigrate from Turkey and increase the Turkish population.

Turkish Cypriot officials insist that the only newcomers in the north are either Turkish Cypriots who had left years ago, seasonal workers needed for the harvest or technicians imported for specific jobs. But interviews with Mr. Keklik and at least half a dozen other settlers belie that claim. Diplomats estimate that 15,000 people from the mainland are already here, and some groups of settlers are clearly organized and encouraged in Turkey.

The Turkish Cypriots have had trouble reviving the economy, however, and still depend heavily on subsidies from Ankara. Half of the Turkish Cypriots were uprooted from their homes in the south, and last season many farmers were too confused or uncertain to sow their crops.

Tourism Still Off
The potato harvest, for instance, was only 3,000 tons, or one-third of what was needed. Through poor planning much of the crop was lost abroad, so the Turkish Cypriots wound up importing potatoes. Similar shortages in other crops have raised food prices about 50 percent. Since they were mainly a rural people, the Turkish Cypriots had little expertise in running factories or marketing their products. As a result, only about 15 percent of the industrial capacity abandoned by the Greeks in northern Cyprus is now being used.

Few goods have been exported, tourism remains poor, and there is a serious shortage of foreign exchange. The ethnic Greeks still control most import licenses for Cyprus, and such key items as spare parts for vehicles and machines are often unavailable in the north.

With help from Ankara, however, the ethnic Turks have constructed a new airport, improved the road and communication systems and started exporting some agricultural products, mainly citrus.

Many Turkish Cypriots still miss their old villages and feel like "foreigners" in Greek homes, but they are starting to settle down. As one man in the village of Ayios Epiktitos said, "If you marry a girl, and then leave her and find another, you don't think about the first one."

Some Greeks Emigrate
For many months after the Turkish invasion the Greek side was also plagued by uncertainty. But as the situation hardened, decisions had to be made.

Some Greek Cypriots decided to emigrate, and every day people line up outside the Australian Consulate seeking visas. Others have gone abroad seeking temporary work in Eastern Europe or the Persian Gulf area. Unemployment is still high here, and there are many idle men lounging around the new houses of Aradhippon. Even for those who find work times are tight. "I was crying all day," said Maria Aresti, whose husband has a public-works job building roads. "My son came home from the army, and I had no money to give him."

Factories Are Rising
But the Greeks, unlike the Turks, have apparently turned the corner on economic revival. With the help of Government incentives, new factories have started rising in the industrial parks of Larnaca and Limassol.

Tourists are starting to return. The stores in Nicosia are ordering new stocks for the first time since the war. But the future for the ethnic Greeks is still clouded by fear and memory. If their area prospers, the Greeks worry, won't the Turks march again and capture the whole island?

And if the Greeks have started to rebuild their lives, they have not forgotten or forgiven. The oldest child of Mr. Vallandis, the grocer in Aradhippon, told him the other day: "When I grow up I'm going to be a soldier and take back my toys from the Turks."

GUERRILLAS SHOOT RHODESIA FARMER

Wounding of White Causes New Worry in Salisbury

SALISBURY, Rhodesia, April 21 (AP)—Guerrillas reportedly shot and wounded a white farmer tonight in Rhodesia's southeastern ranchland near the place where three South African tourists were killed last Sunday.

A hospital official at Fort Victoria said that Edgar Miller, 25 years old, had been admitted to a hospital with bullet wounds but would be released tomorrow. Sources here said that Mr. Miller had been driving between his two ranches to check cattle when guerrillas opened fire.

The report caused new concern in Salisbury. For perhaps the first time in a decade the complacency of the country's 270,000 whites, whose minority government rules 5.7 million blacks, has been ruffled by guerrilla offensives on Rhodesia's 300-mile eastern border with Mozambique, which has a Marxist Government.

Two pictures of the front pages of The Rhodesia Herald today illustrated the apparent determination of its fight and the value strategic targets that viously considered as. The pictures show diesel locomotives on of railroad cars over side the main Rhodes African rail line as r a guerrilla sabotage on Sunday.

High Court Curbs Bank Customer's Right to Keep Records Sec

By LESLEY OELSNER
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 21—The Supreme Court ruled today that an individual customer of a bank has no right to challenge, on Fourth Amendment search-and-seizure grounds, a Government subpoena to his bank for records of his personal banking transactions that the bank is required by the Bank Secrecy Act of 1970 to maintain.

The ruling, by 7-to-2 vote, means that unless the bank itself successfully challenges the subpoena, the Government may use the bank records as evidence in prosecuting the customer in a criminal trial.

The ruling thus makes it clear that a major purpose of the much-disputed Bank Secrecy Act will be fulfilled.

Congress passed the act, which requires extensive record-keeping by banks, on the ground that the Government needed the information to catch criminals and tax evaders.

In 1974, the Court rejected a broad array of civil liberties challenges to the act. It held, among other things, that the maintenance of the records was not, as the challengers had contended, a violation of either the banks' or their customers' Fourth Amendment rights against unreasonable searches and seizures of their papers or property.

However, it had left undecided the question of what rights a bank customer might have to challenge government efforts to obtain the records.

The Court issued two other rulings today supporting law enforcement positions, each in the tax area and each rejecting taxpayers' assertions of constitutional rights.

In the case of Beckwith v. United States, No. 74-1243, the Court ruled 7-to-1 that taxpayers being questioned by Internal Revenue Service agents during a criminal tax investigation and who are not in formal custody because of the issuance of so-called Miranda warnings, prior to questioning, regarding the right to remain silent and to have a lawyer.

Under the Court's Miranda ruling in 1966, the police must give these warnings to suspects during "custodial" interrogation.

Lower Federal courts had split on the question of whether the Miranda ruling should be applied to interviews of taxpayers.

In the second taxpayer ruling today, the Court held that a taxpayer's Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination does not give a taxpayer no ground for contesting a subpoena for documents that an accountant prepared in working on the taxpayer's tax returns. Nor may the taxpayer's lawyer, if the taxpayer has turned over these documents to the lawyer, invoke the Fifth Amendment privilege in the client's behalf.

In 1973 the Court ruled that Fifth Amendment rights of a taxpayer were not violated by the enforcement of a subpoena to an accountant who had documents of the taxpayer in his possession. The precise ruling today appeared in accord with the case of 1973 in that it involved business rather than personal papers and in that the contested documents, and all eight Justices who participated in the case joined in the judgment.

However, Justices Thurgood Marshall and William J. Brennan Jr. dissented from the majority opinion, written by Byron R. White. Justice Brennan called it, like the bank secrecy case, another step in the denigration of privacy principles.

Justice Marshall was more optimistic, saying that while he was not "ready" to adopt it, the new rationale could provide "substantially the same protection" as the principles enunciated in earlier cases.

The dispute centered on Jus-ice White's analysis of the reasoning of various earlier Supreme Court rulings in which subpoenas calling for private documents had been barred by the Fifth Amendment privilege.

As Justice Marshall summarized it, the test in such cases had previously appeared to be the "contents" of the document. The test, as Justice White described it, was whether in producing the subpoenaed document, the person would in effect be verifying that a document existed, was in his or her possession and was the one sought by the subpoena.

The ruling came in Fisher v. United States, No. 74-18, and United States v. Kassin, No. 74-811.

The voting pattern shifted in the fourth case today with Justice Brennan, who had parted from the majority in the three other cases, writing the majority opinion. The ruling, by a vote of 5 to 3, and a victory for the American Civil Liberties Union, which had brought the case, gave an expansive reading of the Freedom of Information Act.

Exemption Disallowed

It did this by narrowly interpreting two exemptions of the act allowing over requested information, especially the exemption for "personal and medical files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of privacy."

The Court found that this exemption does not "protect against disclosure every incidental invasion of privacy."

The Court acted in a case in which members of the New York University Law School's Law Review had sought, will be conveyed by that person through the freedom of information law, summaries of the hearings on honors and ethics at the United States Air Force Academy. The military had resisted on the ground that these summaries were exempted from disclosure.

The lower Federal appeals court found the exemption inapplicable, and that the academy must turn over the summaries to the Federal District Court for examination and cooperate so as to delete personal references.

The high court ruling, in Department of Air Force v. Rose, No. 74-489, affirmed.

The case involving the Bank Secrecy Act, United States v. Miller, No. 74-1179, concerned a Georgia man who was convicted on a variety of charges including possession of an unregistered still, after a trial in which records provided by his bank were introduced. He had sought unsuccessfully to suppress the evidence on the ground that it had been illegally obtained.

The United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit had reversed his conviction, in part on the ground that the subpoena of the records violated his Fourth Amendment rights by taking something in which he had a constitutional privacy right.

The Supreme Court's ruling, written by Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., reversed the Appeals Court.

The high court reasoned that the records were the bank's business records, not the defendant's, and that he had in fact no reasonable expectation of privacy.

"The depositor takes the risk in revealing his affairs to another, that the information to the Government," said.

The Court thus adopted arguments of Solicitor Robert H. Bork.

Mr. Bork also noted that banks may not information to the public courts that had considered the issue had also concluded a bank's records were private property of the owner. He noted that grand often had to rely on maintained by such banks, and that the Security Act had been d to insure that banks have adequate record could be useful in c investigations.

Trial of Governor Of West Virginia Opens in U.S. Court

By BEN A. FRANKLIN
Special to The New York Times

CHARLESTON, W. Va., April 21—Gov. Arch A. Moore Jr. of West Virginia went on trial in Federal District Court here today on a charge of extorting $25,000 from a Charleston financial institution for the Governor's help in obtaining a state bank charter.

Opening statements in the joint trial of the 53-year-old Republican Governor and his former chief assistant, William H. Loy, 43, both of whom have pleaded not guilty, disclosed that the defense would depend heavily on an attack on the reputation of Theodore R. Price, the Government's chief prosecution witness.

Mr. Price, 44 years old, has pleaded guilty in Federal court here to 37 counts of fraud, not directly related to the controversy surrounding the Governor or to the 1972 quest for the bank charter, which Mr. Price never received.

Mr. Price is to begin a three-year prison term when the Governor's trial ends, probably in about two weeks.

The stocky, silver-haired, two-term Governor, a United States Representative for 12 years before he entered the Statehouse here in 1969, sat impassively in the courtroom today while his attorney, Stanley E. Preiser, began the defense attack on Mr. Price by calling the convicted financier a "liar."

Mr. Preiser said that he would prove, through the testimony of Mr. Moore's secretary and his five-man state police security guard, that Mr. Price had never visited the Governor's office to make the alleged $25,000 payment, as Mr. Price is reportedly prepared to testify.

Judge Joseph H. Young of Baltimore is presiding over the trial here because West Virginia's three resident Federal judges were disqualified for their close relationship—not all of them friendly—with the politically combative Governor.

Carey and Albany Leaders Discuss City U. Resistance on

By FRANCIS X. CLINES
Governor Carey met privately with Democratic leaders of the Legislature yesterday to discuss what to do about the alleged intransigence of the Board of Higher Education in reorganizing the City University and cutting its budget.

"I've given up on their ability to deal with the issue," the Senate minority leader, Manfred Ohrenstein, Democrat of Manhattan, said of the university board following a meeting with the Governor, Assembly Speaker Stanley Steingut, Democrat of Brooklyn, and staff specialists.

Stephen Berger, the staff director of the State Emergency Financial Control Board, now in charge of city finances, said the hope was that "an approach" could be fashioned within the next few days for dealing with the university, whose problems include a cash shortfall approaching at the end of this month.

The participants would not discuss details of the meeting, and Senator Ohrenstein described the issue as "wide open" and far from agreement on a formal legislative program.

No Numbers Available
The ideas under consideration reportedly include an extension of tuition, advances of state subsidies and a sharper shrinkage at the university in line with decreasing enrollment projections. No detailed numbers were available on these points, which are only parts of a highly complicated issue involving the rival interests of the university, the state and the city.

The chairman of the Board of Higher Education, Alfred A. Giardino, expressed dismay that university officials were not invited to present their side of the controversy. The "bottom line," he said, appears to be an attempt to force the university board to extend and increase tuition—a step that Mr. Giardino contends, should be taken only by elected officials, not university administrators.

The university board is to consider formally at a private meeting next Monday the question of whether to take up the tuition issue or leave it to elected officials.

The meeting at Mr. Carey's midtown office was significant not only as an indication of the Governor's growing impatience with university officials but also as a sign that, having suffered some setbacks lately in legislative relations, Mr. Carey is taking care to open early communications on the university controversy with his party leaders.

In this regard, the Carey staff made sure to include Assemblyman Irwin J. Landes, Democrat of Nassau, who is chairman of the Higher Education Committee.

Senator Ohrenstein said that after the Democrats discussed the issue, key Republicans, including city lawmakers, would be included. The Governor's aides had said previously that their goal was to see the university reshaped in line with the shifting future needs of both private and public higher education in the city.

The one "very clear" point at the meeting, Senator Ohrenstein said, was that "the Board of Higher Education simply has not been willing and able to focus on the fact that they have to begin to realistically grapple with the financial impact of the crisis like everyone else."

"They've done a lousy job," he said.

University officials repeatedly have denied the charge that they have procrastinated on taking all the economy steps needed to meet the budget cuts backs being mandated by Mayor Beame. Instead, they have charged that the university has faced a disproportionate burden, complaining that $150 million in city and state subsidies has been lost in the last year with more cuts to come.

Mr. Giardino contends that the issue has been muddled by politics in which the city and state have been unable to agree on how much combined subsidy would be furnished in the future to the university. But city and state officials feel that the major practitioners of politics have been the university board members.

The issue is pressing for Governor and other officials to discontinue the city's annual subsidy to the university's senior college in 1977. His understanding of this responsibility was to the state government. Carey officials agree to appear to be no one for the city to co-sid.

Enjoy Israel plus Europe.

If you'd like to combine Europe along with Israel, you can. And in style.

You'll visit cities like London, Paris, Rome or Athens, where you can spend several memorable days after the wonders of Israel. You could even cruise on the Mediterranean or through the Greek Islands. Enjoy Israel Freestyle.

These tours allow you to plan your own day-to-day itinerary and still take advantage of low group rates—without the group. You just buy a round-trip non-affinity group air ticket for 11, 15, or 22 days and combine it with as many hotel nights as you wish—even have an Avis rent-a-car. Or, you can buy just the airfare alone.

And now for a word or two about these prices. They include round-trip economy airfare from New York. They depend on when you go and where you stay, based on per person double occupancy, and are subject to change.

They do not include the $3.00 International Departure Tax or any foreign taxes.

"Suspense and a chilling finale that tantalizes the reader to a page-turning frenzy."

-Ralph Hollenbeck, Parade of Books

Irving Wallace

This is Irving Wallace's most compelling and innovative novel yet. Timely, frightening, The R Document is the staggering story of a conspiracy to destroy the Bill of Rights. Set against a background of rising crime and violence, the proposed 35th Amendment masks a sinister and far-reaching plot to subvert American democracy and replace it with a police state. Filled with political intrigue, pulse-pounding suspense, and drama as real as today's headlines, The R Document is Irving Wallace at his story-telling best.

"Wallace's shuddery mastery of plot is as powerful as ever."
-John Ashmead, Philadelphia Bulletin
"Sensational and readable. Its timeliness is mesmerizing."
-Louis Zara, Chicago Sun-Times
"A political thriller...Wallace's tightest, most relevant novel since The Man."

NEW YORK TO CUT SUMMER JOB PLAN

and Sports Services
Youths Are Reduced
Fiscal Crisis Blamed

DANIEL SHEPPARD Jr., a spokesman for the city, said few government jobs and organized social activities to keep busy this summer because of the city's worsening fiscal crisis.

Although there are more than 1 million people between 14 and 19 of age here, the city is unable to provide summer jobs for only about 65,000—down from 100,000 last year—through a United States Department of Labor program that provides $29 million, according to city officials. Officials are also concerned about the likelihood that reductions in summer social and cultural programs for young people will be made at a time when there are no jobs, creating a situation in which the city has little constructive to do in Services

The decline in summer jobs means a further decline in services by agencies, and is hit by layoffs and cuts, which had relied on jobs to complement their forces. These services include sanitation, and park maintenance, and street cleaning.

Some 1,000 summer jobs are available for youths from 14 to 19 with earnings at the level—up to $5,500 for the year.

2,500 of these jobs are filled and applications for the remainder may begin today at the City Department of Employment.

Jobs pay $55 a week and run from July 5 through August 1. They may be applied for at 60 community centers.

Additional and cultural programs in the past have provided an alternative for youths who did not work during the summer.

State financing of summer activities was trimmed last year, sharply cutting many programs. Financing provided $1.6 million last year. This year is eligible for $2.3 million in Federal funds, but officials said they were doubtful over how much would be allocated.

Reliance on U.S. Aid
A spokesman for the Youth Center said the city was relying on Federal financing to cover $500,000 program that buses and other transportation to carry young people and recreation facilities to out-of-town trips.

If these funds are forthcoming, Parks Department officials expressed concern that their programs will be cut significantly.

Last year we had $12-million for seasonal employees who summer programs and we were left with a deficit," a spokesman for the department said.

Summer programs have been cut by the Parks Department. For example, the city's 20 mobile vans provided puppet shows as well as skating, sports, arts and musical events in neighborhoods on weekends.

Previously, programs for the city's pre-school recreation instruction and instruction programs have been reduced.

The department fears it will only be able to staff 100 grounds, half the number of last year.

Program Impaired
Attrition of skilled recreation personnel has cut the department's ability to operate sufficiently.

Director Haywood said the city's three Model Cities had the summer out of this money "is gone."

Gotbaum Scores Board Proposal To Halt Take-Home Pay Clause

By EDWARD RANZAL

Victor Gotbaum, chairman of the Municipal Labor Committee, charged yesterday that recommendations to eliminate a provision for increasing municipal employees' take-home pay would abrogate union agreements.

In letters to Governor Carey and Mayor Beame, Mr. Gotbaum asked them to sit down with labor leaders to discuss the recommendations made by Richard R. Shinn, chairman of the Mayor's Management Advisory Board. The recommendations followed a report on the city's pension systems by the board's Pension Task Force.

Mr. Shinn suggested the elimination of the take-home provision as well as discontinuance of Albany legislation permitting police and firemen to retire on three-fourths pay if they suffered from heart disease as a result of their work.

Mr. Shinn said that this would save the city $208 million a year, which could be used to alleviate the threatened underfunding of the pension system, and that it could be done over a five-year period.

He noted that his recommendations would cause union leaders to be upset, but stressed that this was probably a subject for collective bargaining.

The provision in contention calls for the city to pick up part of the employees' pension payments in lieu of an outright raise, thereby increasing their take-home pay.

Mr. Gotbaum has said Mr. Shinn's suggestion was a direct violation of the agreement entered into between municipal unions, Governor Carey and the Municipal Assistance Corporation last November, when

PROTESTERS WARN HOSPITAL IN BRONX

Leaders of Fordham Sit-In Threaten to Expand Action

By DAVID BIRD

Community residents, who have been sitting-in at Fordham Hospital for more than a week, threatened to step up their protest against plans to close that Bronx municipal institution because they said hospital officials were not talking to them seriously.

Leaders of the sit-in declined to say what they would do, but Susan Boyd, head of the hospital's community board, said that "at first it will be symbolic and then it will be serious."

Officials of the city's Health and Hospitals Corporation, which runs the municipal hospitals, were bitter yesterday over the falling apart of a tentative agreement reached Tuesday to end the occupation in exchange for a new preview of the protesters' arguments for keeping Fordham open.

That tentative agreement came after the corporation had threatened on Monday to call in the police to remove the protesters.

Officially, the corporation offered only a "no comment" yesterday in response to the questions about protesters' new threats and whether the police would be called in.

Privately, a corporation official said that "if they aren't out in a day or two we're going to have to take some kind of action."

Miss Boyd said the agreement had been rejected by the protesters because it contained no moratorium on the closing of the hospital during the discussions. The hospital is scheduled to close by June 30.

"They don't seem to think we're serious," Miss Boyd said.

"so we've decided to buy the corporation and go to people over them."

Another protester, the Rev. Robert Hanome, pastor of Joseph's Roman Catholic church on Bathgate Ave. made a statement. It was from Fordham's administrative offices, which are being used by the protesters. Father Hanome said:

"We will not under any circumstances leave Fordham until we have a written guarantee from Governor Carey, Mayor Beame, S. Commissioner of Health Robert Hanome, the Emergency Fire Control Board and board of directors of Health and Hospitals Corporation that Fordham-Hop will remain open."

Miss Boyd said the community's determination was stronger than when the protesters first began their occupation. "Fordham's become a cause," she said, "and we're even thinking about re-

Housing and the Law

The Court Ruling in Chicago Case May Have Only a Limited Effect

By ALAN S. OSER

The Court's ruling on Tuesday in Chicago has been hailed as a landmark victory for housing special-interest groups, even those most dedicated to producing integrated housing patterns. It is taking a major step toward a more equitable distribution of housing resources in a city where the white population is concentrated in the North Side and the black population is concentrated in the South Side.

Application Rejected

Moreover, the H.U.D. office has turned down Hempstead's application for a community block grant. The department insists that the Nassau County town provide low-income family housing outside areas of minority concentration.

Under Mayor Richard J. Daley's plan for the summer, the city is going into a neighborhood-by-neighborhood study. The city and did exclude white neighborhoods from the study.

THE RENASCENT SPRING WINE SALE

There is something that stirs all people in this season of rebirth and renewal. Crops are planted, animals husbanded, as nature becomes beneficent. Our business is not food, shelter, or clothing, but nonetheless dependent on Nature primarily plus the unique magic and skill of dedicated people. We are merchants of that which adds an extra dimension to necessity and helps to actualize the phrase, "Man does not live by bread alone." From the fruit of the vine, there is wine. Where there is wine there are wine merchants. Our objective is to do the best and therefore be the best. We offer this sale in furtherance of that goal.

Low Quantity Offerings from High Quality California Vineyards

CALLAWAY WINERY & VINEYARDS:

Located in uniquely Temecula, California northeast of San Diego. Owner Ely Callaway has discovered a unique, microclimate situation conducive to the proper and gradual ripening of the finest varietal grapes. Winemaker Karl Werner, formerly of Schloss Volradts, makes skilful use of the most advanced, sophisticated wine-making equipment currently available. The wines produced are unlike any to come from California thus far, unparalleled in their complexity and elegance of bouquet, of a pedigree and balance on the palate rarely found in wines... anywhere. Equally unusual is their surprisingly low price for such surprisingly high quality.

Chenin Blanc 1974:
This vintage represents the first crush at Callaway. This wine is intensely and elegantly fruit in both bouquet and flavor with hints of apricot and perfect balance of fruit and tannins. 375 4050

Sauvignon Blanc Dry 1974:
A multitude of nuances converge in the bouquet containing great bread, a wine of rare balance and fruit demonstrative of this variety's potential at optimum maturity. 460 4968

White Riesling 1974:
Concentrated though restrained in its power, superlative as of the species. A delicate apricot or as companion to fish, fruit and cheese. 500 5400

BOURGOGNE ROUGE

From E. & D. Maignan, Magasinier & Reconnu:

In Wall Street parlance, we at "67" have taken a long position in the wines of Burgundy. In recent years our experience leads us to believe that it is not in Burgundy. By tasting and re-tasting, we enthusiastically offered these wines to our clients. Enough time has passed and enough wine has been drunk to reinforce our initial enthusiasm. If you have missed the pleasures of fine Burgundy wines, consider trying a bottle or two, a mixed case, or go all the way with us and enjoy perfect wines for your steaks, roasts and chasses.

GERMAN WINES

The vineyard, vineyard, vineyard owners have been reaping a selection of the very best.

Bernkasteler Kurlurstlay 1972 W.W.E. Dr. H. Thanisch

Bernkasteler Doktor can only be described as the pinnacle of German wine with prices often rising to $30.00 a bottle. The 1972 vintage is not bottled under the doctor name but instead is Kurlurstlay, Mrs. Margrit Muller owner of the estate writes: "The wine is very delicate, very typical, original and most certainly deserves its name." We offer this truly great value at less than 1/3 the price its origin demands!

DAVID BRUCE

Truly an individualistic wine-maker, Dr. Bruce's wines are in a class by themselves. His conviction that the less a wine-maker does to his raw material, the greater the quality of the resultant wine finds credence in his unfined and unfiltered wines of a depth and alcoholic richness heretofore unknown in California. They are certainly among the longest-lived wines emanating from California to date. His work with Carignan and Grenache has elevated these "fill" grapes to varietal status. His range of Zinfandels has illustrated the importance and potential of this uniquely Californian varietal. In addition, his massive Chardonnay wines have outshone the finest Montrachet offerings in blind tastings. We are indeed pleased to offer these wines in necessarily limited quantities.

FROM MIRASSOU VINEYARDS OF SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA:

From California's oldest existing vineyard under single family ownership since 1854, come these exceptional Mirassou wines conscientiously selected by our tasting panel. As a customary with our parent, we do not buy indiscriminately; we do not buy every classified growth from Bordeaux as we do not buy every variety from each and every California winery. Rather we attempt to choose only those wines which our outstanding representatives of California's varietal wines. We enthusiastically present these commendable additions to our California wine selection.

Pinet Chardonnay 5th Harvest 1973:
A full-bodied, intensely intense wine with richness in Chardonnay fruit and Lutescent color. 55.99 59.40

Chenin Blanc 1975:
Sprightly and well-balanced with a hint of sweetness, this pronounced Sauvignon Blanc is a perfect companion to Spring and Summer dishes. 3.59 38.77

Petit Syrah 1972:
Slight tannin, almost opaque, with robust, earthy bouquet and deep purple color. A wine of great character and potential. 3.89 42.00

Zinfandel 5th Harvest 1970:
A dark, rich, full-bodied vintage of this varietal. 5.50 59.40

Cabernet Sauvignon 5th Harvest 1970:
Wood, fruit and herbal notes form a well-balanced bouquet. The wine is a perfect companion to Spring and Summer dishes. 6.85 73.98

Petit Syrah 1975:
Dark, rich and elegant, with a hint of sweetness, this pronounced Sauvignon Blanc is a perfect companion to Spring and Summer dishes. 3.19 34.45

Chenin Blanc 1975:
Slightly tannin, almost opaque, with robust, earthy bouquet and deep purple color. A wine of great character and potential. 3.19 34.45

We hope you will share in our enjoyment of these fine varietal wines.

COMPLEXITY SEEN IN 9-MURDER TRIAL

Prospective Jurors Are Told It Will Be Lengthy, Too

By MARCIA CHAMBERS

The judge presiding in the trial of Calvin Jackson, a 28-year-old driver and ex-convict accused of murdering nine women, told a panel of prospective jurors yesterday that the trial would be long, sordid and legally complex.

Mr. Jackson was arrested 19 months ago in the slayings of the women, most of them elderly. Eight of the nine lived in the Park Plaza Hotel, near Columbus Avenue, where Mr. Jackson has a room. All lived alone. No other indictment ever filed against a single defendant in the city's criminal courts is believed to have included as many murders.

Before the initial screening of the prospective jurors in State Supreme Court in Manhattan, the judge, Aloysius J. Melia, told Mr. Jackson's lawyers and the prosecutors for the Manhattan District Attorney's office, that he ruled as admissible at the trial a series of tape recorded and written statements Mr. Jackson gave to police following his arrest. The defense had sought to suppress the statements.

Court officials, anticipating that it would be difficult to find 12 jurors to hear this case, had called a special panel of 200 prospective jurors. As a consequence, the judge moved his court personnel, the lawyers and Mr. Jackson from the smaller 13th-floor court room to the 15th-floor central jury room, which can accommodate that many people.

Mr. Jackson sat some 10 feet from the judge, two court officers behind him. From the moment he took this seat, he placed his hand over his face and stayed that way, unmoving. Nearly two hours after initial screening began, about 70 of the 200 prospective jurors were dismissed for a variety of reasons. The remaining 130 will be questioned today beginning at 9:30 A.M.

At the outset of jury selection yesterday, Justice Melia told the prospective jurors in a 20-minute statement that Mr. Jackson had been accused in

Carey Won't Be a Convention Delegate

By MAURICE CARROLL

Governor Carey has decided not to be a delegate to the Democratic National Convention, his top advisor said yesterday.

There had been some speculation that the New York Governor might head the delegation. But his "current intention," said his secretary, David Burke, is not even to be one of the 274 New Yorkers who will vote for their party's Presidential candidate.

"There are a lot of people who would like to be at-large delegates," said Mr. Burke. "He'd like to make way for them."

The Governor, who is sometimes mentioned as a possible Vice-Presidential candidate, might also like to avoid having to take a stand on the person to fill the top job.

"Maybe he just doesn't want to have to vote," speculated James A. Farley, a former national chairman, and one of more than 400 applicants for the 68 at-large delegate slots himself.

Mr. Farley, 87 years old, attended the last Democratic convention in New York, in 1924. He has applied to go to this year's, which will be held in July in Madison Square Garden, pledged to Senator Henry W. Jackson of Washington.

Mayor Beame is expected to be an at-large Jackson delegate.

The party's state chairman, Patrick J. Cunningham, has been conferring incessantly with party officials in recent days in an effort to stitch together an agreed-upon 68-member at-large slate before the state committee meeting here tomorrow, when they will be chosen formally. He is expected to be an uncommitted delegate.

Mr. Cunningham said that he did not expect to be delegation chairman either. A meeting of the entire delegation will make the choice, he said.

"Unbelievable," Mr. Cunningham groaned, referring to the pressures involved in appointing the at-large slots, which must be assigned to candidates in proportion to their state or the 206 district delegates who were elected in the Democratic primary. "Everybody wants to be uncommitted."

Mr. Cunningham's effort to sponsor what he called an "empire slate" of uncommitted delegates, founded because of lack of support by the Governor and the chairman's own preoccupation with legal troubles.

Mr. Cunningham has spent months fighting efforts by Maurice H. Nadjar, the state's special anticorruption prosecutor, to bring him before a grand jury in an investigation of the alleged sale of judgeships in the Bronx, where Mr. Cunningham is county chairman.

Despite Governor Carey's plan to forgo delegate status, he will be highly visible at the convention. As the host Governor, he will give a welcoming address. Like all Governors, he will have floor privileges.

"And I expect that Hughie will have a nice suite of rooms in a hotel nearby," suggested one local politician who knows him well, "and if there's any business to be done, he'll be there to do it."

New York's collective vote will be the second largest at the convention, exceeded only by California's.

For a long time now, New Yorkers have been accustomed to having their Governor head the state delegation to a national convention, but for years the Governor has been a Republican.

The last Democratic Governor of New York in a Presidential year was W. Averill Harriman in 1956. He was a potential Presidential candidate himself that year and did not head the state delegation. Herbert H. Lehman, the previous Democratic Governor, was listed at the top of the New York delegation in 1936.

The last Democratic Governor of the state to be nominated for President was Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932 and, an active candidate that year, he followed what was then thought to be protocol and did not attend the convention.

an indictment of murdering nine women in 1973 and 1974. Many jurors turned to one another in amazement and instinctively stood up, trying to peer at Mr. Jackson, who slumped in his seat. The judge explained to the jurors that an indictment was merely an accusation, and did not indicate guilt.

The judge told the jurors that a search would be made to find a fair and impartial jury and to this end he explained that the trial would take from four to five weeks, that the death penalty was not an issue and that the case had received widespread publicity.

He explained that Mr. Jackson's lawyers intended to present an insanity defense and that the prosecutors not only had to prove guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, but also had to prove that Mr. Jackson was legally sane at the time of the killings. Finally, the judge said, some of the testimony in the case may be sordid.

Mr. Jackson has been charged

One of 50 Baboons Caught

CINCINNATI, April 21 (UPI)—Officials of Kings Island amusement park reported today that one of 50 escaped baboons had been shot with a tranquilizer dart gun and captured. "That just leaves us 49 to go," said Phil Dempsey, assistant park manager.

Ronald Reagan with Gov. James Edwards of South Carolina in Augusta, Ga., yesterday

ocratic candidates, a factor considered likely to keep many Democratic voters within the fold. Mr. Carter is considered the favorite to win the votes of most Democrats, but the results are not binding. The Democratic ballot carries 18 names, including those of unknown candidates who entered primaries in other states, and also those who have dropped out of the race, but whose names have remained on the ballot. In the Republican balloting, 30 delegates to the Kansas City convention will be allocated on the basis of the results in each of 10 Congressional Districts. The remaining 18 will be pledged to the candidate who carries the state. In his campaign stops here, Mr. Reagan continued to attack the concentration of power in Washington and to reiterate his pledge to return much of that power, particularly in the areas of education and welfare, to the states. Mr. Reagan was also critical of reported overtures by the United States for some form of diplomatic recognition of the Communist Government of Vietnam.

In addition, he hit hard at the Ford Administration's handling of détente, which he said had become a "one way street," pledged to replace Henry A. Kissinger as Secretary of State, and said he would increase military appropriations to forestall what he said was the growing imbalance in military strength in favor of the Soviet Union. Before a crowd of about 2,000 in the Civic Center here, Mr. Reagan said, "The Secretary of the Army has recently told the Senate Armed Forces Committee that if we go to war tomorrow the Army could only equip half of its 18 divisions and the Army Chief of Staff told the House Armed Services Committee that in the event of a conflict our Army deployment would be too little, too late. Mr. Ford has replied with some heat regarding his record of voting for military appropriations. But I also believe that [James R.] Schlesinger, the former Secretary of Defense, was fired for trying to tell the people of America the truth about our military status." The candidate declined to predict the outcome of the Georgia primary balloting, but noted that Rogers C. B. Morton, Mr. Ford's chief political adviser, had conceded in a national television interview that Mr. Reagan would probably win in both Georgia and Alabama, where Mr. Reagan will campaign tomorrow. Mr. Reagan's only previous primary victory was in North Carolina, but he is considered the favorite in Texas, which votes May 1.

Cross-Country Hike Starts

LOS ANGELES, April 21 (Reuters)—A 22-year-old York-smileman set out today from the City Hall here on a 2,876-mile cross-country walk in an attempt to beat the record held by a fellow Englishman, Steve Drury of Middlesbrough, England, said he hoped to beat the time of 53 days, 12 hours and 15 minutes set to New York City Hall in 1972 by John Lees of London.

SIX FORD RIVALS FILING FUND SUIT

Will Ask High Court Today to Release Subsidies

By RICHARD D. LYONS

WASHINGTON, April 21—Six candidates for the Presidency will join forces tomorrow in requesting the Supreme Court to free almost $2.4 million in Federal matching campaign funds to ease their financial problems.

The five Democrats and one Republican will argue in motions to be submitted to the Court that their First Amendment rights are being violated because the lack of Federal money is hampering their communication with the electorate.

The Court ruled earlier this year that the Federal Election Commission, which had disbursed the campaign money, had been appointed unconstitutionally. Its powers lapsed March 22, and no funds have been distributed since then.

The six are former Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia, Senator Frank Church of Idaho, former Senator Fred R. Harris of Oklahoma, Senator Henry M. Jackson of Washington and Representative Morris K. Udall of Arizona, Democrats, and former Gov. Ronald Reagan of California, a Republican.

If the Court orders the money to be made available, Mr. Ford would receive the most—about $900,000. Because of an influx of private contributions, his campaign finances are in excellent condition.

This has led to speculation that if legislation reconstituting

Multilingual Elections Ordered by U.S.

WASHINGTON, April 21 (UPI)—The Justice Department ruled today that 513 political jurisdictions in 30 states must hold elections in more than one language to comply with 1975 amendments to the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

In the New York metropolitan area, the ruling affects the Bronx, Brooklyn and Manhattan in New York State and the town of Bridgeport, Conn., in all of which Spanish is the second language. No jurisdiction in New Jersey is involved. The act, originally designed to protect black voters from discrimination, was amended last year to extend the protection to all "language minorities."

The jurisdictions covered are determined by a complex formula. Attorney General Edward H. Levi, using Census Bureau reports and other data, determined that 513 towns, cities and counties covering all or parts of 30 states must conduct elections in more than one language.

The commission, which is now before a Senate-House conference committee, reaches Mr. Ford he would veto it, since he would need the matching funds the least.

But today the White House press spokesman, Ron Nessen, denied that Mr. Ford was attempting to "starve out" Mr. Reagan. He said that since Congressional action on the legislation had not been completed, the President was not in a position to say if he would veto it.

In tomorrow's motions, the Court will be asked to modify its previous decision in the commission case to allow it to certify matching funds so the Treasury can pay them.

The Democratic National Com-

In addition, Mr. Levi said, 314 of those jurisdictions—including the Bronx, Brooklyn and Manhattan, but not Bridgeport—are required by the act to obtain prior Federal approval of any new laws or other political changes that would affect the voting rights of the language minorities involved.

Compliance Guidelines

Mr. Levi proposed compliance guidelines that would require officials conducting multilingual elections to issue all published announcements, posted notices and voting instructions in the minority language.

The basic purpose of these requirements is to allow members of applicable language minority groups to be effectively informed of and participate effectively in voting-connected activities, Mr. Levi said.

The states covered all or in part include Alaska, Arizona, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Hawaii, Idaho, Kansas, Louisiana, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Virginia, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

Minority languages involved in the various jurisdictions include American Indian, Alaskan native, Chinese-American, Filipino-American, Japanese-American, Korean-American and Spanish heritage.

A jurisdiction is covered if three conditions exist: Over 5 percent of those of voting age are in a single language minority group; registration and voting materials were provided in English only on Nov. 1, 1972; fewer than 50 percent of all voting-age citizens registered or voted in the 1972 Presidential election.

Bilingual Ballots Ready

The four jurisdictions in the metropolitan area affected by the Justice Department's ruling already have bilingual ballots.

Ford Seeks to Help F.D.A. Expand Overseas Tests

WASHINGTON April 21 (AP)—President Ford asked Congress today for $16.3 million more to help the Food and Drug Administration monitor industry testing of drugs and food additives. This would supplement the $223.1 million the agency is seeking for the fiscal year 1977.

The request comes in the wake of recent criticism that the F.D.A. has not adequately monitored the testing of new drugs on humans.

In a report last January, the General Accounting Office, a Congressional agency, said the F.D.A. had conducted only limited inspections to determine if drug sponsors were obeying the law.

Democrats in Missouri Avoiding Choices

St. Louis, Mo., April 21 (UPI)—Democratic voters in Missouri are avoiding choices in the first round of the state caucus, they were getting today.

The voting in precinct and county caucuses in at least 40 of the state's 114 counties will be held today. Most of the rest are scheduled for later.

Senator Eggleton insisted that uncommitted delegates would be truly uncommitted and not fronting for Senator Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota.

Republicans in Missouri have precinct and county caucuses scheduled for the rest of this week to start selecting 30 delegates to the Congressional Districts and 19 others at-large.

Only a few Republican caucuses have been held. In the rural areas, former Gov. Ronald Reagan of California appeared to have got a handful of delegates, but President Ford was winning the bulk of them and was expected to do even better in the final voting at the district caucuses.

Missouri Democrats will send the largest caucus-selected delegation of any state to the national convention opening July 12 in New York. This was the first time the national party's proportional representation rules have been applied here.

Barely 20,000 out of this state's 2.2 million registered Democrats showed up at last night's caucuses. Participants, like those at the West Elementary School here, split into groups supporting one of the candidates or were labeled uncommitted. In each caucus, a formula—prescribed number—had to be in support of a candidate or be uncommitted to select delegates to their district conventions May 25.

Among the 69 who gathered in the school's gymnasium here, enough favored Mr. Carter to give him four delegates to the district caucus, while the remainder chose to be uncommitted and will send 10 such delegates.

At the district caucuses, after any switching of support, a candidate will have to exceed a minimum support number before he can share in that district's delegate total. If he fails to get that number, his precinct and county delegates can switch to another candidate who has a qualifying number, or join the uncommitted group.

This afternoon, with 99 percent of the 839 district caucus delegates counted last night already counted, there was at least an indication of how those who had participated viewed the candidates.

There were 547 choosing to be uncommitted. Of the remainder, 111 will go to their district caucuses favoring Mr. Carter, 43 for Mr. Udall and 18 for Senator Jackson. The remainder will support other candidates.

But none of the delegates are bound to their preferences and may change support at the district caucuses, at the state convention on June 12, when the 17 at-large delegates will be chosen and even at the national convention.

did most of the voting, accepted the arguments of Senator Thomas F. Eagleton and State Treasurer James I. Spainhower, the top statewide party leaders, that an uncommitted delegation would be the most effective force at the national convention.

There was clearly no overt enthusiasm among Missouri Democrats for any of the announced Presidential candidates.

"ANNOUNCING AIR PANAMA. THE AIRLINE WITH THE UNFAIR ADVANTAGES!"

Most people believe that an airline is an airline. And unless you consider Air Panama, they're absolutely right. Air Panama is a different sort of airline. Because we compete with Pan Am, Lufthansa, Braniff and Avianca, we've got to be better. And being better means giving our passengers a lot of good reasons for flying with us.

For instance, when you fly first class with any one of our big competitors, you have to pay through the nose just for the opportunity to sit in the front of the plane. On Air Panama everyone gets first class service—and the extra special attention that comes with it. It doesn't cost a penny more.

Furthermore, on Air Panama all the way to Panama City, Caracas, Bogota, Guayaquil and Lima there's an open bar for your enjoyment. Because we feel that should be another one of the advantages when you fly with us.

And last but certainly not least is Air Panama's seating. Unlike our big competitors, Air Panama's 727's let you spread out without spreading over the person sitting next to you. For more information about Air Panama and our frequent flights to Central and South America, talk to your travel agent or one of our representatives. Toll free 800-327-9027.

Leader of Rubber Strike

Peter Bommarito

Special to The New York Times

CLEVELAND, April 21—Peter Bommarito, the international president of the striking United Rubber Workers, was relaxing in his hotel room late this afternoon when the telephone rang and an aide whispered, "It's Fitz." News Mr. Bommarito sprang to the phone and talked for a few minutes with Frank E. Fitzsimmons, the president of the teamsters' union, in Washington. When he hung up, someone asked whether the teamsters were going to support the rubber workers' picket lines.

"I'm real happy at the conversation," Mr. Bommarito answered, a knowing smile flickering beneath his white mustache.

Before the phone call Mr. Bommarito was speaking idealistically of the goals of organized labor in general and of his 190,000-member union in particular, but he shifted gears quickly to speak of the practical needs of a union with 70,000 members on strike against the country's four largest rubber companies.

Nearly Perfect Skill

People who know him say he is a past master at tempering the ideal with the real. It is a skill he learned and honed to near perfection growing up in the streets of Detroit, the youngest of 12 children of an Italian immigrant family. He is both a former Marine and a former altar boy.

Those who sit across the bargaining table from him say that Mr. Bommarito, who is 60 years old, is a tough negotiator, an accomplished spokesman for the people he represents, always armed with facts and ready to apply pressure to assist him in persuasion.

When not negotiating, Mr.

Bommarito is a tireless campaigner for occupational health and safety, an area of particular concern to rubber workers because of their constant contact with chemicals that have been identified with a variety of diseases, especially cancer. He can cite chapter and verse of the diseases rubber workers suffer from. Of one of them he confided: "It took me three weeks to learn to pronounce that."

'Alleviate the Suffering'

"In 1968 you couldn't get a quorum of congressmen to sit and listen and try to put through a bill on occupational safety and health," Mr. Bommarito said. "But our whole struggle is how do you relate technical progress to human progress. It's a struggle of human rights over property rights. There's got to be an answer to alleviate some of the suffering."

"What's more important," he asks, "a job or your life? We wanted both, but we had to make a choice, and it was that we'd rather have vital organs than a job."

Mr. Bommarito was born in Detroit on May 17, 1915. As a young boy he sold newspapers, swept cages in newsstands and shoveled snow from driveways in fashionable Grosse Pointe, Mich., for a nickel a piece. He would also hop coaling trains and knock off coal for his brothers to pick up and sell.

He got his first exposure to organized labor in 1930, when he heard that an auto plant was hiring and went to look for work, only to find a picket line around the building.

"I could hear them grumbling about gas fumes, abuses of the foremen, what they made the girls do to keep their jobs, the preference they showed in overtime," he recalled. "I sat there, and I was entranced."

Rubber Workers Picket In Akron as Talks Go On

Special to The New York Times

AKRON, Ohio, April 21—Under an overcast sky and drenched by intermittent rain, rubber workers began picketing the Akron plants of Goodyear, Goodrich and Firestone today as a coast-to-coast strike got under way at 47 rubber plants in 21 states.

Scattered violence was reported at the three Akron plants, six persons were arrested, thousands of office-workers were prevented from going to work, and injunctions were issued limiting the number of pickets.

Meanwhile, in Cleveland, leaders of the United Rubber Workers and the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company held a negotiating session, the first since early this morning just after the walkout began. No progress was reported at either of the meetings today, and the union members said they were digging in for a long strike.

By afternoon, only a small number of pickets remained at each gate of the three struck rubber companies whose headquarters are here. The fourth company, Uniroyal Inc., has no operations in Akron.

Stockpiling Tires

The four companies account for about two-thirds of the nation's tire production, and a long shutdown could cripple the automobile industry. But auto makers have said that they have been stockpiling tires in anticipation of the strike, and normal operations could continue for a few weeks.

Outside the Firestone plant just south of downtown Akron, strikers were erecting green and white tents to use as picket headquarters and were bemoaning the fact that the rain had kept many people home. But they said they were determined to stay out until they won a satisfactory contract.

"I don't care if they don't settle for six months," said Kenneth Phillips, 57 years old, who has been on strike 11 times in 34 years with Firestone, including a 92-day walkout in 1967. "I just want living costs and a better retirement so when I do get out I don't have to beat my brains out figuring how to live."

Mr. Phillips, the father of three children, said he earned $256 for a 40-hour week of painting blemishes out of tires as they come off the assembly line.

"All four companies going out together, that was the best thing that ever happened," Mr. Phillips said. "That's what they should have done before, and we wouldn't have been out so long."

The union will pay $35 a week in strike benefits, starting in two weeks, but the strike fund will be exhausted three weeks after that. At the Local 7 union hall a few blocks from the Firestone plant, a food stamp committee was fashioning a plan to get assistance for as many workers as possible.

"A lot of guys will be hurting real bad," said Ernest Stripe, 48, a member of the Food Stamp Committee with 25 years at the company. "If you got $1,500 in assets, you are not eligible for food stamps." Early this morning, stones and bottles were thrown at

In 1939, he went to work as a web fabric machine operator at the U.S. Rubber Company, now Uniroyal Inc., one of the big four companies against whom he is leading the strike. "Some of the things I saw there I tried to correct," he said, an attempt that started him on the ladder of union offices that led to his election to the presidency of Local 101 in 1957.

Three years later he was elected international vice president of the rubber workers and in 1966 he rose to the presidency. Since 1969 Mr. Bommarito has been a vice president of the executive council of the A.F.L.-C.I.O.

Fought in Pacific

Participants

The United Rubber Workers are negotiating for a three-year master contract with the Big Four rubber companies—the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, the B. F. Goodrich Company and Uniroyal Inc.—but are concentrating their efforts on Firestone to make it set the pattern for the industry. The union represents 70,000 workers at the four companies, 10,000 of whom have not been recalled from it that started during the recession.

Talks are being held at the Sheraton-Cleveland. The union team is headed by Peter Bommarito, international president of the union, and the Firestone team by Joseph V. Cairns, director of industrial relations.

Issues

The union wants its members to catch up in time with the production workers in the auto industry, who now $1.65 an hour ahead of the rubber workers. It is demanding an unlimited cost of living clause, which not previously had. Management has offered an increase of $1.15 an hour over three years and a complex cost-of-living clause.

The union is seeking higher pension, health and retirement benefits and wants the companies to contribute more to supplemental unemployment benefit funds, of which went broke during heavy layoffs.

The Big Four companies say they want to force-paid workers in non-tire plants to accept smaller than the tire workers get. They say the competitors those areas from small nonunion companies is severe. Companies also want to give lower raises to non-tire workers at plants in the South and Southwest, where rates are lower than the $5.60 an hour national average. Officially the union is standing firm that all workers get the same across-the-board increase. But there are indications that it might agree to separate tire and non-tire rates in an effort to save more jobs for its members.

War II and signing up in the Marines instead. He spent 34 months in the Pacific, fighting at Guadalcanal and a half dozen other places before he was shipped home with malaria.

These days he and his wife, Dorothy, get away to Wyoming and Colorado when they can, where Mr. Bommarito enjoys hunting and "I get into a sleeping commune with Mother Nature," he says. "But on the job he has a role as fulfilling the work of a Papal Encyclical of Pius, which he quotes up to each and every one to insure justice or to insure peace."

Case 26985—1976 Long-Range Electric Plans. April 2

NOTICE is hereby given that, in accordance with the requirements of Section 14 of the Public Service Law and the Commission's Rules of Procedure (16 NYCRR, Part 161), by the New York Power Pool and the Empire State Electric Energy Corporation will be held before the Commission on Thursday, May 6, 1976, at 10:00 a.m. to be continued Friday, May 7, 1976, at the offices of this Commission, Empire State Albany, New York. As in past years, the public hearings on the 1976 long-range plan include presentations of the Power Pool and the electric corporations, questions or representatives by the Commission and its General Counsel, and oral or written comment interested persons. The topics addressed in the 149-b filing, the subject of these include: demand and energy forecasts, capacity additions, generation site selection, mission facilities, and research and development programs. The Commission expects the following approximate schedule:

- May 6, 1976
- 10:00 a.m.—10:45 a.m.—The New York Power Pool will discuss the Pool range plan and its many implications.
  - 10:45 a.m.—12:30 p.m.—Representatives of the New York Power Pool—
    - a) Load forecasting including a description National Economic Research Association's R
    - b) Capacity Expansion Planning including instance criteria, economics, and siting.
  - 12:30 p.m.— 1:30 p.m.—Lunch recess
  - 1:30 p.m.— 3:30 p.m.—A panel of representatives from the Pool and each members will answer questions.
  - 3:30 p.m.—Oral comments from the public.
- May 7, 1976
- 10:00 a.m.—11:00 a.m.—The Pool will make a presentation concerning research development and will answer questions.
  - 11:00 a.m.—Oral comments from the public.

FURTHER NOTICE is hereby given that, in order to analyze in depth the statewide for additional generating units, additional hearings (Phase II hearings) shall be in addition to the initial public hearing to be held before the entire Commission, to invite the Power Pool's and the electric corporations' load forecasts (including an analysis of casting methodology and conservation's impact) and capacity additions (including an of the reserve requirement standard adopted by the Power Pool.) The Commission will submit for incorporation in Article VIII proceedings the evidentiary record made in PI of this long-range planning proceeding.

Testimony for this second phase of hearings shall be prefiled by the New York Power on or before April 30, 1976. Cross-examination of the Pool's witnesses shall commence Wednesday, June 2, 1976, at 10:00 a.m., to be continued through June 4, 1976, offices of this Commission, Empire State Plaza, Albany, New York, with further hearings necessary, to commence on Wednesday, June 9, 1976. Commission Staff and Intervenor testimony shall be prefiled on or before July 16, 1976, and cross-examination of Staff Intervenor shall commence on Wednesday, August 4, 1976, at 10:00 a.m., to be continued, as necessary, at the offices of this Commission, Empire State Plaza, Albany, New York. Time for prefiling and cross-examination of rebuttal testimony, if such testimony is necessary shall be determined after the commencement of the Phase II hearings.

Written comments on the long-range plans may be submitted to Samuel R. Mad Secretary of the Public Service Commission, Empire State Plaza, Albany, New York 12 any time prior to July 15, 1976. Persons wishing to make oral comments at the initial public hearings (May 6-7, 1976), including oral comments to supplement or amplify written comments, should notify the Secretary prior to the hearing dates. Within the time available for public comments, priority will be given those who have so notified the Secretary. In order to accommodate all those who wish to be heard, members of the public are requested to oral comments to ten minutes.

Questioning of representatives of the various electric corporations at the initial public hearings in this proceeding will be conducted primarily by members of the Commission and its counsel. If time permits, questions of a clarifying nature may be addressed to the public utility executives by members of the public. Persons desiring further information assistance should contact Staff Counsel David Hecker, Empire State Plaza, Albany, New York 12223, or call (518) 474-7072.

Copies of the long-range plans are available for inspection at 4 Irving Place, Manhattan 310 E. Kingsbridge Road, Bronx, 4E-82 Main Street, Flushing (Queens), 30 Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, 60 Bay Street, Staten Island and 210 Westchester Avenue, White Plains between 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. each week day. A copy of the 1976 long-range plans may be procured by contacting Stephen B. Bran at 4 Irving Place, New York, N. Y. 100- (212) 460-3416.

Because individual proceedings of a judicial nature will be conducted for each proposed major generating facility or transmission line which may be proposed eventually for construction, the scope of this proceeding will not include an in depth inquiry into particular sites for generating facilities or specific routes for transmission lines. Rather, the parties should address their comments to the planning features of the subject presentation, including such aspects as the following:

- (1) adequacy of the data;
- (2) demand forecasts;
- (3) adequacy of supply;
- (4) generating mix;
- (5) adequacy of planned transmission grid;
- (6) the reasonableness of the assumptions underlying the various projections;
- (7) the format of the presentation; and
- (8) research directions and priorities.

Mr. Hughes is curiously inconsistent with other accounts provided by equally reliable visitors to Mr. Hughes over the last few years.

Fortune magazine, for example, had a report of Mr. Hughes's September 1972 meeting with two officials of a New York brokerage firm who had flown to Managua, Nicaragua, to obtain his signature authorizing the sale of the oil-drilling division. That report had Mr. Hughes looking "pretty much as he had when last seen in public 15 years earlier, clear-headed and alert and bidding his visitors goodbye with a firm handshake."

A similar description of Mr. Hughes as a "commanding personality" with a firm handshake was provided to reporters seven months later by Donald N. O'Callaghan, Governor of Nevada, who met with him in London to discuss the future of his gambling interests.

Some former Hughes insiders, however, said the man they had known never possessed a firm handshake, and that after an air crash in the late 1940's that increased his susceptibility to respiratory disease, he had developed a lead him to refuse to touch foreign objects or other individuals.

Mr. Gay enjoyed an equally close relationship with his employer after 1970.

One associate recalled that Mr. Gay told him in 1966 that he had not spoken to Mr. Hughes during the preceding seven years, and he said that it was his understanding that Mr. Gay's access did not amount to much after Mr. Maheu was forced out.

In his declining years, according to this associate and other former associates, Mr. Hughes dealt with outsiders exclusively through his male secretaries, mostly Mormons, a group that one close observer described as the most important figures in the Hughes empire, because "they're the sole contact he had with the world."

The secretaries handled all of Mr. Hughes's correspondence, passing on his directives and relaying reports to him from his executives. The former associate said that in doing so, they had "the power to add and delete" information as it suited them.

They apparently were well paid for their services. By one public account, Lavar Myler and John Holmes, two of the secretaries who are also directors of the Summa Corporation, earned $85,000 a year each.

Mr. Hughes aides have proved resolute in their refusal to speak with outsiders about Mr. Hughes since his death. Speculation on the reason for their silence varies from a sense of loyalty to their late employer to the clandestine nature of some of the work.

Another explanation, however, was offered recently by friends of Howard Eckersley, one of the aides, who said that he had sold them that each of the male secretaries had been made the recipient of a trust fund, set up by the Summa Corporation, "that will take care of them for life."

Mr. Hughes's distaste for personal publicity that he deemed even remotely unflattering was well known throughout his organization, and while he lived his aides' associates were loath to discuss, with outsiders even the most trivial aspects of his business affairs. Any mention of his personal life was unthinkable.

After his death, some observers expected that his secrets would begin to tumble forth, but that has been only to a limited extent.

The only rumbling of discontent heard last week was the reported unhappiness of some Summa employees who had not been invited to attend the brief funeral service held for Mr. Hughes in Houston, but that unhappiness has not evoked any disclosures from them.

The question of whether Mr. Hughes left a will has been a central one in both Salt Lake City and Las Vegas, the two places where the Summa Corporation's roots are most firmly planted.

The talk in Las Vegas among those with interests in the gambling business is pragmatic, and tends to focus on whether the Hughes properties, which account for 13 percent of the gambling industry's total take there, will continue to operate, who will operate them and whether they will be broken up to pay the massive Federal estate tax that will come due unless a will is discovered that leaves the estate to charity.

One former Hughes intimate said last week that he believed a will had never been executed and recalled an occasion in the late 1960's when it became necessary for him to know precisely who stood to inherit the Nevada hotels in the event of Mr. Hughes's death.

He attempted to discuss the existence of a will with his associates, the man said, but Mr. Hughes refused to entertain the matter and displayed "a complete inability to confront the fact that he would ever die—he couldn't even discuss the question of death intelligently."

The final irony may be that the Hughes estate, to which relatives are now preparing to lay claim, could turn out to be considerably smaller than the $1.5 billion.

One former Hughes aide said, for example, that many of the Nevada holdings—five hotels, two casinos, raw land, mining claims and a television station—were purchased—in at least one case with a loan from the teamster union's central states pension fund—and that the cost of the four largest of the five hotel properties was only $77 million.

Howard Hughes Medical Foundation, and Mr. Hughes hinted at that in an extraordinary 1972 telephone news conference called to denounce as a fraud a purported Hughes autobiography by Clifford Irving.

But if Mr. Hughes died intestate, if no will is found that leaves some or all of his millions to a legitimate public charity, then the full Federal estate tax of 77 percent will have to be paid on what is left after deducting the costs of administering the estate.

In the continuing absence of a will executed by Mr. Hughes, some relatives in Houston, headed by 85-year-old Mrs. Frederick R. Lummis, Mr. Hughes's aunt, have joined with Summa executives to oversee the orderly transition of the estate.

Although no public conflicts have yet arisen between the Summa officials and Mr. Hughes's relatives, their interests could conceivably diverge if the potential heirs decided to liquidate the corporation's assets by selling the hotels and other properties, and the executives resisted.

Such conflicting accounts led some longtime observers of Mr. Hughes to recall that in the early 1960's, when investigators for T.W.A. were attempting to serve legal papers on Mr. Hughes in the shareholders lawsuit that resulted in the $500 million judgment, the Hughes organization hired an unknown character actor named Brooks Randall who bore a remarkable resemblance to the wealthy recluse.

Mr. Randall, one former Hughes aide recalled, was put on public display at least twice in that period. On one occasion, in a San Francisco nightclub, according to the former aide, he spent Mr. Hughes's money freely, causing mention of "Mr. Hughes's" presence in the next day's gossip columns and throwing the T.W.A. men off the scent.

The former aide said that Frank William Gay, who replaced Robert A. Maheu as Mr. Hughes's chief executive assistant, was aware of Mr. Randall, but he could not say whether the actor had been employed to impersonate Mr. Hughes in recent years.

Mr. Hughes and Mr. Maheu spoke frequently on the telephone and corresponded directly during Mr. Hughes's four-year residence in Nevada, but there is "doubt" in the minds of some former associates that

Princess Anne Hurt As Horse Tumbles

Thrown by her horse in a competition yesterday, Princess Anne suffered a cracked vertebra and spent the night in a Dorset hospital for observation.

Candlewick, a 7-year-old owned by Queen Elizabeth II, stumbled at the next-to-last fence in a cross-country event in the Portman Horse Trials. "It seems that the horse fell on her," a Buckingham Palace spokesman said later. Capt. Mark Phillips, husband of the 25-year-old princess and fellow-rider in the event, was at her side in minutes. He spent the night at the hospital.

British equestrians were speculating whether the fall would affect Princess Anne's chances of selection for the British team to compete at the Montreal Olympics. But Captain Phillips said last night, "I can't see any reason why she should not be back riding at the weekend."

Campaigning for her husband in Texas yesterday, Betty Ford described as "a little distasteful" some of the skits on NBC's "Saturday Night" television show last weekend. "So did the President," Mrs. Ford said. Mr. Ford, introduced in a taped film clip, "didn't know what was going to take place," she said. But they "thought the White House material was very funny—we both laughed at it and had a good time," Mrs. Ford said.

The First Lady was also in a good mood as, for the first time, she tried out her portable Citizens Band radio during the Texas motorcade.

"You got 'First Mama' she said, inaugurating the identifying name, or "handle," suggested by the comedian Flip Wilson. Halting occasionally to consult a CB glossary, Mrs. Ford said, "I see a lot of 'smokies' [police] at my front door [in front of me]—all I can think of is 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, where there are a lot of police at my front door." To a CB operator who called himself "Pete Lee Charlie," she signed off, "A 10-4, good buddy. Catch you on the flip [return trip]."

In New London, Conn., L. Patrick Gray Md. who underwent surgery last August to correct an aneurysm (or "blister") of the aorta, was back in Lawrence Memorial Hospital yesterday. The 69-year-old former acting director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and a partner in a New London-Groton firm, the hospital refused to discuss his condition.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California, who has refused to live in Sacramento's new gubernatorial mansion, did not say yesterday that he would not live in the White House if elected President—but he did say he would, either. The Governor, an aspirant to the Democratic Presidential nomination, was questioned at Los Angeles news conference. "If elected President, I will serve," he said. "And I'm sure I can find adequate housing in Washington."

Police Check Photographs To Find Architect's Killer

Detectives sifted yesterday through scores of photographs of young men found in the apartment of Michael Greer, the prominent interior decorator who was found murdered Monday in his residence at 525 Park Avenue.

A police source said they were proceeding on the theory that Mr. Greer, 60 years old, might have been strangled by one of the young men whom he had invited to his $1,000-a-month apartment. They are also continuing their interrogation of friends and associates of the slain man.

Blood stains were found in some places in the bed where Mr. Greer had been murdered, as well as on the sleeve of a robe of his found on a chair near the body. These, too, are being checked. Mr. Greer had been the decorator of one of the rooms in the White House in Washington.

BEAME IS ACCUSED ON RENT SUBSIDIES

LeFrak Says City Seeks to Divert Federal Funds

By JOSEPH P. FRIED

The city's biggest private landlord, Samuel LeFrak, said yesterday that the Beame administration was seeking to divert Federal rent subsidies from families in private apartment houses to low-cost public housing.

Mr. LeFrak charged that such a diversion would be illegal and destructive to private housing generally and would "sabotage" efforts to rescue the LeFrak City apartment complex in Queens from the serious financial and social problems besetting it.

City officials acknowledged that they are seeking to use most of the Federal subsidies for low-rent public housing, rather than award them to families in privately owned housing. But they deny that the proposal is illegal, and they say it is necessary to help the city cut its own outlays for public housing at a time of city fiscal crisis.

High Vacancy Rate

The dispute is the latest development in the effort to overcome the severe problems plaguing LeFrak City, a 5,000-family, 20-building complex built in the 1960's in Elmhurst. The problems include high vacancies, the flight of white families, and their replacement by blacks, who today make up 60 percent of the LeFrak City residents.

Physical deterioration also became an issue at LeFrak City last fall, with tenants and elected officials accusing the management of neglecting maintenance and the LeFrak Organization holding that it had sought to preserve the development.

Priority Given

Roger Starr, the city's Housing and Development Administrator, said that "our primary priority" is to use most of the money "to help the city meet its most urgent financial crisis," this could be done, he said, by giving the subsidies to tenants in certain public housing projects here, thus reducing the city's own contribution to meet the growing deficits in these projects.

Airline Strike Over Quickly

SEATTLE, April 21 (AP)—A machinists' strike against Alaska Airlines was tentatively settled today about eight hours after 312 members of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers quit working, an airline spokesman said. No details of the agreement, which union members must ratify, were available.

Samuel J. LeFrak

held that the city proposal would be legal so long as the Federal Government was willing to waive certain regulations. A spokesman for the Federal Department of Housing and Urban Development said his agency could not "express a view one way or the other" until the city formally submitted its proposal.

But Mr. LeFrak said he would fight the city proposal in court and charged that the Beame administration was embarking on a ruinous course generally, and had broken commitments made to him by the Mayor.

A City Hall spokesman could not respond immediately, but Mr. Starr insisted there had been no such commitments.

AROL PARKING CASE IN BRONX STUDIED

Critics Assert That Company Lacked a Permit to Rent Spaces to Yankee Fans

By JOHN L. HESS

When Arol Buntzman promised in writing in June 1973 "not to operate a general public parking operation in the Bronx Terminal Market," city officials thought they had settled at least one of their points of contention with the promoter.

The Department of Consumer Affairs is investigating complaints that the Arol Development Corporation, of which Mr. Buntzman is president, was renting city streets in the market last weekend to Yankee fans for parking, without a license.

A spokesman said it was also reopening an old complaint that peddlers in those streets were being required to pay Arol for the privilege.

The parking issue may appear minor, but it was at the heart of negotiations in which the city gave Arol a 99-year lease on the market and then amended the lease at a cost to the city estimated at $10 million.

When the city decided in 1971 to buy and renovate Yankee Stadium, it considered assigning the parking to Arol. The Yankees, however, insisted on having an experienced operator, and the Kinney System got the job. But there was not enough space for parking, unless the northern end of the market was included.

A search of city files reveals that officials were aware of the problem. On March 3, 1972, Paul M. Levine, then assistant economic development administrator, wrote to Edgar C. Faber, then Commissioner of Ports and Terminals:

"I cannot emphasize too strongly that if the lease is signed without these incorporations [releasing space for 2,400 cars] we will most likely be in default of our lease with the Yankees."

Assured on Conflict

The lease was nevertheless signed by Ken Patton, the Economic Development Administrator, without change. He did, however, obtain from Mr. Buntzman what he described to colleagues as an assurance that the conflict with the Yankees' needs would be resolved at leisure.

This came in a letter from Mr. Buntzman to Mr. Patton dated May 3, 1972, saying:

"Please count on us for our fullest cooperation. Be assured that we will do all we can, within the limits of our powers and economic feasibility and in conformity with the interest of the Bronx Terminal Market and its continued growth and operation, to help develop and make available 'sufficient' additional parking on the Bronx Terminal Market site."

A year later, one memorandum in the files was headed: "Summary of Counter-Counter-Counter Proposal for Parking in the B.T.M."

Arol, represented by the law firm of Patrick J. Cunningham, had presented a growing list of demands for revision of the lease, in exchange for releasing the parking site. It ended with more space than before, a cut in rent, a free hand in the choice of tenants, release from obligations to build new construction and a commitment by the city to spend some $8 million on construction and repairs.

Accused of Stalling

Officials accused Arol of stalling, to increase the pressure on the city to settle the dispute so that deadlines for the Yankees' project could be met. At the same time, memoranda in March and May 1973, alleged that Arol was in default of its own obligations to insure the premises fully and to begin new construction.

But according to one junior aide, suggesting that the city move to cancel the Arol lease on those grounds were rejected. Instead, Mr. Patton presented the lease amendments to the Board of Estimate as a boon to the city, supported by a Budget Bureau report that conflicted with internal memoranda, and the board approved the changes unanimously.

It was during the 1973 negotiations that Arol promised not to operate a public parking business in the market. It had earlier received complaints from city inspectors about its use for that purpose of the streets and open spaces, excluded from the lease, and about its levying fees from street peddlers in the market.

Merchants in the market said Arol has been charging peddlers $175 a month to sell refreshments there, and had collected $2 a car for parking during Yankee games through last weekend. Asked about this, Arol referred the question to a lawyer, who said he knew nothing about it.

Chess: Wild Gambit Goes Crashing Against an Accurate Defense

By ROBERT BYRNE

Special to The New York Times

LAS PALMAS, Canary Islands, April 20—Efim Geller of the Soviet Union held on to his lead through the 12th round of the fifth Las Palmas International Tournament here in the Santa Catalina Hotel by defeating Roberto Debaton of Argentina in an English Opening. Geller, with 9-3, is hotly pursued by Bent Larsen of Denmark, half a point behind.

RODRIGUEZ/BLACK

Position after 12 B-K3

Larsen also won in the 12th round when Vitaly Zeshkovsky of the Soviet Union overstepped the time limit in a complex position in the adjournment session.

Lajos Portisch of Hungary lost ground to Larsen when he let slip a positional advantage against José Fraguela of Spain and had to take a draw. Portisch retained third place with a 7½-4½ tally.

5 in 4th Place

Five players are tied for fourth place with scores of 7-5: Gudmundur Sigurjonsson of Iceland, Robert Hubner of West Germany, Zeshkovsky and Kenneth Rogoff and myself of the United States.

International Master Orestes Rodriguez of Peru, usually solid and conservative, tried to upset Geller by throwing the wild Schlieffmann gambit at him in the 11th round, but he never had a chance against the Russian's accurate defense.

The variation 4... N-Q5 and 5... P-B3 is difficult to refute, assuming that Black continues with 6... P-Q3; 7 R-K1, N-Nch; 8 QxN, P-B5, long a favorite of the Chicago master Pavlas Tautvaisas.

However, Rodriguez was bent on a wild experiment with 6... N-B3. He was eager to build a strong pawn center after 7 NxP, PxP, even if it cost him the exchange after 8 N-B7, Q-K2; 9 NxR (the knight will never escape). Yet there was no impeding Geller's unruffled development with 11 P-Q3 and 12 B-K3.

Supporting the central knight with 12... P-B4 might have come into consideration, except that 13 BxN, PxB; 14 N-N5, Q-B4; 15 N-KB7 would have let Geller's KN return to play. On the other hand, Rodriguez's 12... NxBch; 13 NxN brought about simplification useful to White.

Geller clarified the center with 14 PxP, PxP and quickly got his queen into action with 14 Q-K1 and 16 Q-R5. Before Rodriguez could ever get started with a mating attack, Geller seized the queen file with a rook, 17 QR-Q1, RxR; 18 RxR, ruining whatever hope Black might have had.

Rodriguez's exchange 18... NxB; 19 PxB, simplifying the position further, was a sad admission that the white bishop was too effective to be allowed to remain on the board. Moreover, when he finally picked up the white knight with 19... BxN, it was his own king that was exposed by 20 QxP.

After 23 N-B4, Rodriguez resigned in disgust, since 23... P-KN4; 24 R-Q5, PxB; 25 Qx Pch, QxQ; 26 RxBch K-Q1; 27 RxB would have made Geller's task too easy.

Councilman Gets a List Showing District 5 School Name Changes

By PETER KIRSS

A number of New York City public schools have been renamed to reflect ethnic changes in hopes of offering new models for pupils in the last few years since local school boards took over jurisdictions.

The former Louis Castagnetta Public School 132 in the Bronx, for instance, is now named for Garrett A. Morgan, who the principal, Marie Thomas, said was the black inventor of the gas mask and a traffic light.

Mr. Castagnetta, for whom the school at 1245 Manhattan Avenue had been named, was president of the United School Boards of the Bronx in the 1920's and later a district school superintendent.

Mr. Morgan (1877-1963) used his gas inhalator, invented in 1914, in a historic 1916 rescue of workers from a smoke-filled water tunnel 200 feet down in Lake Erie. This brought him orders from many fire companies, only to have some canceled when his race became known. As a result, Mr. Morgan had to use a white demonstrator in the South.

only if there were changes in places named for President John F. Kennedy, who he said had "authorized assassination" of Prime Minister Fidel Castro of Cuba.

Name Choice Deplored

SAN JUAN, P.R., April 21 (UPI)—El Mundo, a Spanish-language daily here, today deplored the proposal to name a Harlem school for Pedro Albizu Campos. It said he represented "the glorification of violence... the rejection of the democratic system" and "the examples of inspiration for Puerto Rican youth must be those who have dedicated their lives to raising Puerto Rico from hopelessness and economic misery."

List Is Supplied

A list of changes was supplied by the Board of Education yesterday to Henry J. Stern, Manhattan Liberal Councilman at Large, who had asked the Board of Education to amend its rules to provide central-board review.

Community School Board 5 has voted to rename Fiorello H. La Guardia Public School 161, at 499 West 133d Street, to honor Pedro Albizu Campos, a Puerto Rican leader who served 20 years in prison on charges growing out of his Nationalist Party's revolutionary and terrorist activities.

School Board 5 has voted four other changes since 1972 to honor blacks. It renamed Manhattanville Junior High School 43, at 505 West 128th Street, for Representative Adam Clayton Powell, an 11-term Harlem Congressman who died in 1972.

The board renamed James Fenimore Cooper Junior High School 120, at 18 East 120th Street, for Dr. Louis T. Wright (1891-1952), the first black staff physician in a municipal hospital here and board chairman of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Bridge: L. I. Regional Play to Open At Belmont Track Tonight

By ALAN TRUSCOTT

The biggest event of the year for Long Island bridge players begins tonight at the Belmont Park race track.

It is the Long Island Regional Championship, sponsored by the Nassau-Suffolk Bridge Association, and during four days of play there will be five major events that allow players to earn the gold and red points needed for life-master rank-knockout teams, beginning tonight, at 8 P.M. and continuing through Sunday; men's pairs and women's pairs, 2 P.M. and 8 P.M. Friday; open pairs, 1:30 P.M. and 7:30 P.M. Saturday; and Swiss teams, noon and 6 Sunday.

Defending the women's pair title will be Judy Schwartz and Priscilla Rutkin of Roslyn, L.I. Mrs. Schwartz, who has had a string of victories on Long Island and farther afield in the last two years, took full advantage of a helpful opening lead to bring home a difficult game on the diagramed deal from a recent team match.

North would have been well-advised to end the auction at two spades, for there was clear evidence of a misfit. When he bid three diamonds, Mrs. Schwartz was awkwardly placed with the South hand. She tried four clubs, and the partnership reached the shaky spade game.

The heart queen would have been a sensible opening lead for West, but he chose the club jack, a selection that South viewed with considerable pleasure. She won with the queen, cashed dummy's two diamond winners and ruffed a diamond. She then cashed the club ace and the heart ace before ruffing a heart. Dummy was entered with a trump lead, and another heart ruff left this position:

NORTH (D)

WEST
♠ K	♥ Q185	♦ Q975	♣ KJ102
♠ Q10875	♥ K43	♦ J62	♣ 96
SOUTH
♠ J96432	♥ 10	♦ 10	♣ AQ874

Both sides were vulnerable. The bidding:

North	East	South	West
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

West led the club jack.

North

♠ Q	♥ Q	♦ Q	♣ K 10
-----	-----	-----	--------

South

♠ J9	♥ —	♦ —	♣ —
♠ 87	♥ —	♦ —	♣ —

A club lead forced East to ruff his partner's trick and give South her 10th trick. Oddy enough, the bad trump break worked in South's favor. If the trumps had been more evenly divided, the contract would have been in jeopardy.

Lottery Winner to Get $10,000 Denied Him

WETHERSFIELD, Conn., April 21 (UPI)—The State Gaming Commission today authorized a $10,000 payment to Barry Brunelle of Stafford, who won the money in a state lottery but was denied the winnings because he was a minor.

The panel, officially known as the Special Revenue Commission, took the action following Gov. Ella T. Grasso's signing a bill yesterday ordering that young Mr. Brunelle be paid the money. He was 17 years old when he bought the winning Instant Lottery ticket.

The commission found that state laws prohibited ticket sales to minors and refused to pay Mr. Brunelle the $10,000.

The General Assembly then approved a bill ordering the commission to pay him.

Bonjour, Happiness

By ANATOLE BROYARD

LOST PROFILE. By Françoise Sagan. Translated from the French by Joanna Kilmer. 272 pages. Delacorte/Henry Holt, $6.95.

Some years ago, John Cheever published a story about a man who traveled a good deal in the course of his business and, during those travels, inevitably found himself obliged to use the toilets in various waiting rooms.

So it is with Françoise Sagan. The precocious adolescent who burst upon the world murmuring "hello, sadness," is now a writer of shamelessly happy love stories.

She is saved by Remarkable 'Luck' Josée, the heroine of "Lost Profile," is undergoing the agony of a divorce, in which she is being "literally torn apart."

himself, and this smart-set Parisian woman never pauses to wonder about his disinterestedness or the remarkable "luck" he has brought her.

Secure in her new independence, Josée marvels that her old companions can keep from "laughing at themselves." In their presence, she now feels so stifled that she retires to a quiet corner and throws open a window to feel "that fierce, primeval wind, sweeping down from some remote galaxy."

Waning and Waxing It turns out in "Lost Profile" that the author has been deceiving not only Josée, but the reader as well. Julius confesses that he "desperately" wants to marry Josée.

Enter Louis Dalet. We know immediately he is the hero because dogs love him. In fact, he is a veterinarian. His superhuman ability to satisfy the animal side of Josée's nature is an innocent fringe benefit of his profession.

Their love does not lack appropriate expression. "And I had thought before knowing him," Josée rhapsodizes, "that the sun was hot, that silk was soft, and that the sea was salt."

It only goes to show that in such things we cannot hope to outdo the French. Compared with theirs, American love stories are little more than a working out of the Protestant ethic.

Looking Backwards

In political and legislative life, the commonest temptation is to settle for too little. Nevertheless, there are situations in which the best is the enemy of the good. That has proven to be the case with regard to the struggle in Congress to revise the campaign finance law. After the Supreme Court held that the members of the Federal Election Commission had been appointed in an unconstitutional manner, President Ford urged Congress simply to revise the law correcting that single defect. In retrospect, the President's position was sound. The Court's decision had, however, also torn other, more significant holes in the law, notably by abrogating any limit on political expenditures. The friends of campaign reform in the Congress decided to try to repair the damage. The Times endorsed this ambitious effort; and we now see that we made an error of judgment in doing so.

As events developed, the attempt to revise the entire law led to protracted lobbying by business and labor groups, and wasted precious time. The upshot was that Congress adjourned a week ago for its Easter recess without passing a bill although House-Senate conferees have agreed on a compromise version.

It may be another three to four weeks before Congress passes the bill, the President signs it—and we certainly hope that he does—and the Senate reconfirms the members of the commission. Until all this has been accomplished, the commission cannot dispense Federal matching funds to the Presidential candidates—unless the Supreme Court rules otherwise in a suit brought by the beleaguered candidates. Yet during this interval, Pennsylvania, Texas, Indiana, and other states are holding primaries that may determine the Presidential nominations of both parties.

The three active Democratic contenders—Senator Jackson, Representative Udall, and former Governor Carter—and Republican challenger Ronald Reagan are all being hurt in varying degrees because of this unanticipated financial famine. Only President Ford, whose campaign now enjoys a healthy surplus, and Senator Hubert Humphrey, who is not entered in any primaries, are unaffected by the hiatus.

Recriminations have already started. There is the aroma of a dirty political deal although legislative long-windedness and the clashing of many outsized political egos in both the House and the Senate may have had more to do with causing this financial famine than any conscious guile.

But if any members of Congress thought they were doing either Mr. Ford or Mr. Humphrey a favor, they may well be proved wrong. On the Republican side, the critical Texas primary is not likely to turn on the expenditure of money. Texas is big but Republicans are few and concentrated in metropolitan areas easily reached by Mr. Reagan's intensive personal canvassing.

On the Democratic side, Mr. Humphrey can emerge as the nominee only if there is a deadlocked convention. Such a deadlock can occur only if the Jackson and Udall candidacies remain viable until the convention. Starving those campaigns of money hardly seems the best way to keep them alive, particularly when Mr. Carter is the highly publicized front-runner.

Reformers and regulars in Congress may yet see that a simple and prompt amendment of the campaign law would have been the wisest course.

Convert to Conservation

Saving energy is cheaper than producing it—and the payoff comes far sooner. That conclusion has long been argued by environmentalists and conservation-minded energy experts; at last the Energy Research and Development Administration has accepted it as Government policy. A series of energy conservation programs is now to be assigned the same high priority in Administration planning that formerly went only to industry-backed measures to develop new energy supplies.

ERDA's revised comprehensive energy development plan, submitted to Congress Monday, goes part way toward meeting forceful criticism by the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment. That analysis charged last October that ERDA (successor agency to the Atomic Energy Commission) was still pursuing "a narrow, hardware-oriented approach" to energy problems, ignoring non-technological issues such as incentives for individual energy-saving initiatives and public ignorance of—or even resistance to—new processes.

If there may still be room for doubt about how extensive ERDA's new-found interest in conservation will turn out to be, other arms of the Government are gradually starting to move in the right direction. Last year's comprehensive energy legislation authorized disbursement of a yearly $50 million to help the states on localized energy conservation programs; the funds will be available only to states which have already implemented first steps toward more efficient use of energy within their jurisdiction.

The Federal Energy Administration has set efficiency targets for the ten most energy-intensive industries and is requiring the fifty largest companies in each of those industries to file periodic reports of their progress toward meeting those targets. The Senate has passed a stiff measure, proposed by the Administration, to withhold Federal mortgage money from localities that fail to adopt energy-efficient building codes; unfortunately, this bill is being blocked in the House of Representatives.

The next major step to promote energy conservation is likely to be a detailed program of tax rebates and credits as incentives to homeowners and small-business men who insulate or otherwise retrofit for the purpose of saving energy. Senator Kennedy and Representative Drinan, both of Massachusetts, have taken the lead on this legislation in Congress.

Effective conservation of energy is a slow and complicated process, but even more so is the development of new energy sources—as the latest ERDA report acknowledges. Both are essential in the coming decade to reduce this country's vulnerability to foreign oil supplies.

Mr. Kissinger's Africa

Secretary of State Kissinger takes on an extremely delicate task when he leaves tomorrow for a seven-country tour—his first ever—of sub-Saharan Africa.

The mere announcement of an itinerary that will bring Mr. Kissinger close to the areas of the remaining struggles against white minority rule in southern Africa brought protests from some African leaders, with the result that the itinerary has already been revised to eliminate countries where there was concern for Mr. Kissinger's personal safety or where governments—Nigeria is an important example—decided they were unwilling to receive him at this juncture. Some of his African hosts, particularly President Kaunda of Zambia, are even incurring political risks in agreeing to his visit.

Mr. Kissinger's own political risks begin with the fact that he is not in position to say convincingly what black African leaders want most to hear from the United States. Africans know that he is concerned above all to check Soviet and Cuban intervention on the continent, while they are concerned above all to bring majority rule in Rhodesia and Namibia (South-West Africa) and the dismantling of apartheid in the Republic of South Africa.

In other circumstances, African leaders might respond enthusiastically to American efforts to eliminate outside intervention—particularly great-power intervention—in southern Africa. But they recoil with distaste that in his zeal to check the Soviet-Cuban effort in Angola, Mr. Kissinger was ready to accept at least an informal alliance with the white South African regime. And some of them wish to retain the option of seeking Soviet, Cuban or Chinese help should this become necessary to end white rule in Rhodesia or Namibia.

Mr. Kissinger's trip could prove worthwhile if it persuades him to view the gigantic problems of southern Africa in terms less related to this country's rivalry with the Soviet Union. There may yet be time for a constructive American policy to assist in a peaceful transition in that part of the world. But the hour is late, as the destruction of part of Rhodesia's rail link with South Africa and the brutal murder of three South African tourists by African guerrillas have just illustrated.

Rescuing WNYC

The nation's only noncommercial municipal radio station, WNYC, has become a possible victim of the fiscal crisis in New York City. It will either fail—and if it does, probably will never be put together again—or be rescued by a plan combining a viable new structure with outside public support, or be sold off to become just another space on the dial filled with raucous sounds.

Before WNYC is permitted to die, it should be given a chance to operate as a nonprofit public corporation—along the lines of public TV's Channel 13—with the ability to receive grants from the city, state and Federal governments and to engage in soliciting funds from foundations, private corporations and its dedicated public. This would permit the hard-pressed city to begin a phased withdrawal of its operating funds—a cut of $700,000 in the broadcasting system's current $2.1 million budget—and restructure WNYC without losing its franchise from the Federal Communications Commission.

Another possible solution would be to absorb WNYC within WNET (Channel 13) so that a coordinated approach could be worked out for both the city's AM and FM stations and its television service (Channel 31). Under such an arrangement, WNYC could place greater emphasis on educational broadcasting and avoid some of the current duplication of public service programs in the metropolitan region. WNYC should be given an opportunity to continue even if the city itself can no longer afford to keep it going.

Suffolk Underground

The future development of Suffolk County independently and as part of the metropolitan New York region is the real issue underlying several sporadic investigations now going on about the questionable costs, engineering and possible political scandals involving the Southwest Sewer District. What began as a $291 million sewer system for Islip and Babylon townships along the Great South Bay has grown into a public works project that, if and when completed in the next two years, could cost over a billion dollars.

The Suffolk County District Attorney, the local legislature's finance committee, and the State Environmental Conservation Department are all looking into different pieces of the puzzle. Among questions being raised are whether the sewage lines can be hooked into other systems and if proper precautions have been taken to prevent discharge of great amounts of waste into the ocean off Long Island; if lucrative contracts and cost overruns have resulted from improper bidding and inadequate auditing; and if local Republican leaders have profited from the project and even used it to "launder" funds.

Since the Democratic district attorney is himself under investigation on an unrelated matter and neither the county legislature nor the State Environmental Conservation Department has the expertise to unravel all the legal responsibilities and criminal accusations, a full inquiry is called for. This should be undertaken by the office of David C. Trager, United States Attorney for the Eastern District of New York. It is surely a "Federal case" since about 85 percent of the sewer system's total cost is paid for by Federal and state governments.

The Southwest Sewer District has the dimensions of an underground "Tweed Courthouse" scandal. The surface facts disclosed so far require nothing less than an independent investigation that cuts across party—and sewer—lines.

Public Pensions: The Unfair Programs

To the Editor:
A great deal of attention has been given recently to governmental retirement programs. The Shinn study of New York City's municipal systems as well as other recent studies offer temporary penance rather than permanent corrections to a political pork-barrel system. To talk in terms of employee contributions today where such contributions represent after-tax dollars while the self-employed can provide their benefits using pre-tax dollars is incomprehensible. The real reason for the municipal pension plans' problems is the fact that they are subject to the whims of legislators.

The first step in the process of controlling fiscal integrity of municipal pension programs would have to be separation of the provisions of such programs from the legislative process. The second step, now long overdue, would be to eliminate all employee contributions and provide that benefits provided by contributions of the taxpayers be limited to a percentage of final average compensation (three or five years exclusive of overtime) as is presently provided by the New York State Banking Department with respect to banks under its supervision with legislation permitting the establishment of Individual Retirement Accounts to supplement such benefits. Another long-overdue change is the need to restrict payment of benefits before age 65. It is unfair to the taxpayers and the business community if a uniformed officer can retire at age fifty, with a substantial pension, and enter the job market, thus reducing job opportunities for others. An earnings test of, say, $500 per month would obviate this situation. Such a test might incorporate a provision which would permit the employee's pension to increase in a less-than-actuarial manner for the period of suspended payments.

The pension industry is very concerned with the adverse publicity being given to governmental pension programs and the effect of such publicity on employees covered by the private sector's pension programs. The problem encompasses the Federal Civil Service Retirement System, the Railroad Retirement System and other quasi-public systems.

We must in all this recognize the need for all employees to be covered, by O.A.S.I. in order to assure at least minimal income for all retirees. It is unconscionable for any group to withdraw from the Social Security System, because such an action creates unnecessary hardship on those losing coverage and eventually must lead to increases in welfare rolls and Social Security taxes.

The basic question is what represents a fair and reasonable post-retirement income. Once we have the answer, all of us can proceed in a logical and equitable manner to assure that post-retirement incomes maintain a proper relationship to pre-retirement incomes. J. GOLDBERG

Our 'Sick' Youths

To the Editor:
Your April 11 news article "Talk 2 Young Muggers Who Prey on Elderly" describes well a current social illness. At the risk of being labeled an "intellectual antique," I feel that young people who physically assault the elderly are sick. If they are sick, these pathological persons should not be allowed to roam the streets in search of more victims. For ten years I have been a school teacher and have also worked in a juvenile detention center. I witnessed first-hand the scars of America's young have carved from homes hidden with holism; physical beatings, rape, sexual abuse, parental desertion and more. I have also seen the tragic results of parents who failed to give guidelines and limits for their child to follow. From such backgrounds some children can survive and into maturity. Others cannot.

While it is sad to see any of America's psychologically sick sometimes for life, it is also sad to see the elderly maligned and frightened. A healthy society must not tolerate condone the violent activities of youth, nor must it allow its youth to be seen or seem to be that illicit and despicable acts go unpunished. It is immoral for a so-called government to be uncommitted by a government that portends to guarantee the protection of life, liberty and happiness to its citizens.

Whether punishment really deters crime among the youth of America is debated indefinitely. On the one hand, the attitude that "nothing happens to me" or "I will only get caught at the end" certainly does help in developing civic and moral responsibility among the young. A more realistic rehabilitation program demands a recognition on the part of offenders that something is wrong with them; that they are not like the rest of us; that he wants to do something about changing his life style. I do not see how "social going to rehabilitate" him.

Perhaps it is time to re-evaluate the influence of television on its view to redefine the juvenile and juvenile court system, to re-emphasize the duties and responsibilities of young besides their rights.
JOSEPH C.
Hempstead, L.I., April 14

Of Guns and Liberalism

To the Editor:
I would applaud your editorial expressed concern [April 11] for a "68 percent of America favor of stricter gun controls." I respect for vox populi were selective. It is not regarded, as mentioned, in those areas we do not concur with your liberalism.

No matter how great a majority opposed to forced busing, favors total punishment, disapproves of quotas and reverse discrimination cries the softness of criminal justice or inveighs against the abuses of welfare state; the will of the people does not necessarily prevail.

This same two-faced posture revealed by your describing the "as the most brazen of lobbies" would never use such a derogatory phrase in writing about the unions that buy and sell political liberties pampered of inials or the welfare state proponents of economic ruin. Anyone of "brazen" lobbies is a million more dangerous to us all than so-called "Saturday-night species" the world. ROBERT ELLERY T.

The Subway Rats' Edge

To the Editor:
I can't feel too sympathetic to the hypertensive rats, who, according to The Times of April 15, should be riding the subway because stress could do them in. At least don't have to pay for their extra noise, shaking and crowding delay in getting to their destination and maybe they do not mind riding in the dark, which is not uncommon. JOSEPH BRANT
Elmhurst, N.Y., April 15

Foreign Policy Out of Da

To the Editor:
Regarding your news report of 4-8 on Mr. Sonnenfeldt's remarks concerning America's newly awarded visa-ban on a new "Soviet bloc," I should like to ask what Dr. Kissinger's views are to be a "natural" relation between sovereignty states?

It seems that since the beginning of his tenure as Secretary of State, Kissinger has progressively attempted to refashion a mid-twentieth-century world into a mid-nineteenth-century one—perhaps to accord in closer with his Bismarckian-Metternichian conceptions of international politics. His most recent attempt conceptually to mold the East European countries into a more rigid Soviet bloc is itself "unnatural." It fails to recognize the power realities of 1976. MADELINE K. PAR

The Operative Laws

To the Editor:
In his April 12 letter, Richard Cantor took issue with The Times's editorial view (March 31) of the Supreme Court's ruling on sodomy laws. Rather than viewing the Court's decision as a curtailment of the right to privacy, he offered two alternative interpretations. One is based on the view that the Court was unwilling to hear a merely hypothetical case in which no actual criminal prosecution was involved, and the other was that the Court does not wish to take on the legislative task of clearing the books of laws in disuse.

I am the "fictitious" Virginia plaintiff in the case in question. I would like to disabuse Mr. Cantor of his interpretations.
As regards the first point, and contrary to Mr. Cantor's views, many people are currently prosecuted for "sodomy" (e.g., the case above). Indeed, a fellow pair of Virginians, who are husband and wife (the Lovises), were recently convicted of sodomy and sentenced to prison terms. Even the U.S. Supreme Court (J. H. Rose, Warden v. Harold Locke) recently upheld the conviction of a Tennessee man for engaging in oral sodomy (with a woman).

There is small comfort in these facts for either homosexuals or heterosexuals. "JOHN DOE"
New York, April 13, 1976

Harmless Oil Seepage

To the Editor:
Your March 30 editorial "Offshore Challenge" stated that "the transfer of oil at sea is an environmentally dangerous operation, involving a degree of leakage that has a cumulative effect on the shore more deadly than occasional dramatic spills." This misconception is widely held, but results from several major studies conducted recently negate this opinion.

For example, a two-year study of the effects on marine life of offshore oil production in the Gulf of Mexico was conducted by 23 scientists from twelve Gulf Coast universities. This area is not only the greatest offshore oil producing region of our nation but also our nation's most productive fishery.

These scientists concluded that the low-level chronic exposure to oil has had no measurable effect on marine life; that the production of the fisheries has increased markedly during the 25- to 30-year presence of the oil industry there, and that every indication of good ecological health exists.

Similar results were obtained in a two-year study in Lake Maracaibo, Venezuela, where 6,500 wells have been drilled during the past four decades.

In a three-year study on the effects of large natural oil seeps near Santa Barbara on the local marine life, investigators from the University of Southern California found that all organisms are present that would be expected to be in that environment if oil seepage were not there; exposure to natural oil seepage has no effect on either the growth rate or productivity of the organisms, and the health of the local marine community is not affected.

Also, under platforms in the Santa Barbara Channel, other researchers have found that a highly complex community of marine life has developed. Each platform is "home" for 20,000 to 30,000 fish, representing at least fifty species. Every available underwater surface of the platform is heavily encrusted with mussels, barnacles, sea anemones and other forms of marine life.

These results overwhelmingly show that low-level discharge from production, transport or transfer of oil at sea does not cause measurable harm to marine life. E. W. MERTENS

This fall the United States may face an epidemic of a severe influenza known as swine virus that resembles the strain that killed more than twenty million people in 1918-19, of whom 550,000 were Americans.

At Fort Dix, N. J., one soldier died from swine-virus flu early this winter.
He was one of 12 documented cases.
There were several hundred more estimated cases.

In response to this threat, President Ford has asked Congress to appropriate $135 million to produce a flu vaccine to be given to everyone in this country. It is impossible to produce and administer sufficient vaccine by next fall with only $135 million.

Mr. Ford was acting on a recommendation provided by a committee of epidemiologists, virologists, immunologists and public-health officials whose task was to determine whether a vaccine should be produced. They apparently did not address themselves to several other major problems that are likely to arise whether or not the epidemic occurs. It would be helpful to think about these other issues now since our lives would be affected.

The production of the vaccine, which will necessarily be rather crude in quality because of the hastiness of the process, will cost $107 million, and the remaining $28 million, or 10 cents per dose, is to pay for the storage and delivery of the vaccine to inoculation centers, the syringes or jet-injector "guns" used, clinic and office overhead, and the inevitable medical-legal paperwork.

Ten cents cannot pay for all this;
it will take at least an additional thirty to forty cents per dose to administer the vaccine. None of the fifty states has that kind of money. New York State doesn't and certainly New York City doesn't.

The last time the New York City Department of Health was called on to vaccinate most of the citizenry in a very short time was in 1948 during a smallpox outbreak. More than six million persons were inoculated in 28 days—the fastest, largest mass-vaccination program in history. Today, the department is much smaller and much poorer.

The best place to vaccinate most
New Yorkers is at health stations.
There are only 18 now; budget cuts have been forcing stations to close, and even fewer will be open by September. They operate only eight hours a day, five days a week; there is no money for overtime. Using the department's 21 jet-injector guns, which can vaccinate about 300 persons an hour, department workers could vaccinate one million people in five weeks. At that rate, it would take one year to vaccinate eight million. Of course, private doctors and hospitals can be relied upon to inoculate many people, but not nearly enough.

And it is crucial to realize that in addition to the more than eight million people in our city, there are 1.5 million more who are illegal aliens, as well as six million commuters (who will probably avail themselves of the free vaccine during lunch hours).
Even if the Federal Government gave New York 10 million doses, the danger of a vaccine shortage would still be very great.

There is yet another serious problem that neither the health establishment nor the politicians appear to have considered. Even if the flu does not reappear, the vaccination program will surely receive wide coverage in the news media, and as with most important events misinformation will proliferate. The public may be led to expect prompt vaccinations for everyone and other medical attention that many people simply will never receive, unless additional Federal money is approved very soon.

Health departments across the United States are watching very carefully for new cases of swine virus.
If any do crop up, public concern, fed by the media and normal fears, may turn quickly into panic.

The President, his advisers and Congress may simply be ignorant about the way mass terror—the most contagious of all epidemics—can suddenly erupt when people feel their lives are in danger but are prevented from getting adequate help. And it may also be possible that these officials, like most of us, prefer to deny this possible course of events and instead to rest securely in the dream of personal immortality.

Israeli Arabs' Status

By Atallah Mansour

NAZARETH, Israel—On the whole, one can easily say that Israel has treated its Arab minority as equals.

The Israeli Arabs are in a legal position to express themselves, vote in the national general elections, run for any office. They can produce their own newspapers, publish any books.
They may organize in political, social, cultural or religious groups. Moreover, the Ministry of Education permits them to preserve and sustain their different national and cultural heritage in their own schools.

Still, it is seldom that Israeli Arabs can be heard in a private conversation expressing anything close to satisfaction with their lot, and it is very easy to understand and justify their deep frustration and bitterness.

First of all, they were part of the Arab majority of Palestine up to 1948, and they remember it all too clearly.
The natural shock of a community that evolved overnight from a dominant majority into a humiliated minority cannot but suffer a deep trauma.

The fact that the Arab world, both official and public, ostracized them as traitors because they refused to leave the regions of Palestine that became Israel served only to balance their anti-Israeli feelings. If our "brothers" were so badly lacking in understanding, why were we to expect the Jews to be warm and friendly?

Arabs in Israel were certainly treated with strong suspicion. For some twenty years, they needed a written permit from the Israeli military governor to move around and look for a job, visit a medical clinic, and attend classes at a school outside their own villages. Their contacts with the Government agencies were made through special "Arab departments."

All these restrictions were removed in 1966, except the "Arab departments." The official claim is that those departments are meant to give Arabs special—but also favorable—treatment. The employees in such offices are usually able to speak Arabic, and specially trained to treat the "Arab mentality" and its unique needs.
But the Arab counterclaim is not less convincing: One can justify a special department of Arab education, but who decreed that all these "specialists" ought to be Jewish, and who said that public housing for young couples should be different depending on whether the couples are Christian, Muslim or Jewish?

And what bothers the Arabs in Israel most: Why should the Government expropriate lands from Arab private owners and townships to turn them over to Jewish settlers? An Arab in Nazareth who lost his land in the mid-1950's and cannot today purchase an apartment built on it in the new Jewish town of Nazareth-Elit cannot help but feel deep fury.

The Ministry of Housing advertises in the Hebrew press there that there are empty apartments in the Jewish town, but hundreds of Arab couples have been waiting for years for the fulfillment of pledges to build them
"special" homes. Not one such apartment has been built in Nazareth in the last eight years.

I recently heard the mayor of Jewish Nazareth-Elit, Mordechai Alon, elaborating on the plans to attract Jewish residents to his town. He said that 8,800 apartments were planned or already built in his town and that he was now offering a package deal:
a new Ford with a home in Nazareth-Elit at a lower price than a home in Tel Aviv, and of course, with a generous Government subsidy.

That is the sort of discrimination that lies beneath most of the grievances of the Israeli Arab.

Why are our villages and townships lacking industrial plants, why are educational facilities missing, why do we not share in Israeli political parties (except Raikah, the New Communist List) or participate in the pressure groups that rule and influence policy (especially that of our own affairs)?

The State Land Authority owns three million dunams of land (a dunam equals a quarter acre) in Galilee; Arab private owners only half a million du-nams. Why expropriate our land?

The inability of the Arabs, except the Druse, to serve in the army sharply limits their mobility and promotion into the main sphere of influence in Israel. But the Israeli Government treatment of the Druses, who served and courageously fought in all Israeli wars does not induce Christian and Moslem leaders to ask the Government publicly to integrate Arabs into army service and to treat them on an equal footing with the other citizens. The official Government claim is, We exempt Arabs from military service to save them the dilemma of fighting their Arab brothers.

The authorities say they have a "good" reason for the special privileges bestowed on Jewish settlers in Nazareth-Elit and similar new settlements: It is Jewish money donated by Jews for Jews.

But they have not shown any evidence that those Jews are donating money to close a dangerous and growing gap between Arabs and Jews in Israel. This gap is a time bomb that may eventually explode and cause more damage to peace in Israel, and to its international reputation.

newspaper Haaretz.

NATO Speech Draft

By William Safire

My fellow Americans, and my fellow free men and women of Western Europe:

I come to speak with you tonight on international television about a matter that deeply concerns the North Atlantic alliance. We have to ask ourselves whether this alliance, or any alliance, can exist half-Communist and half-free.

The purpose of America's participation in the NATO alliance has always been to make certain that our friends in Western Europe could determine their own destinies—to choose, in freedom, what kind of governments they wanted to have.

Today, the very success of NATO has brought us to a point that none of the founders of NATO foresaw:
There is a possibility that one, and perhaps more, of our partners will choose to turn over power to local Communists of their own free will.

What should the reaction of the other NATO nations be? Should we be silent, and wait for the consequences that would flow from the transition of power to the Communists in Italy, and perhaps in France? Or do we have the obligation, as friends and allies, to share with our partners our concern that ultimate Communist domination of their Governments would lead to a fundamental change in the alliance?

Some of our European friends have said to the United States: Stay out of this; speaking out would only cause resentment and do more harm than good.

I understand that. No proud and sovereign nation likes any other country, especially a superpower across the sea, making suggestions about its own elections. But our European friends, in suggesting we should keep quiet, have not spoken out themselves. Instead of pointing to the clear and present danger to the alliance of Communist takeovers—as they did last year in the case of Portugal—these other Europeans have talked only of "accommodation," of "adjustment."
They have resigned themselves to democratic defeat.

That was not the spirit that created NATO, or made it the bulwark of freedom for a generation. America and its allies did not "adjust" to Communist pressure in Berlin. We resisted pressure with an airlift, and our forthright stand turned the tide of Communist expansion.

We recognize that the new challenge to NATO does not come overtly, through an Iron Curtain. We realize that the new challenge comes under the curtain from the freedom of choice that democracy provides, and Communism—once in power—has always destroyed.

We recognize, too, that America has a great stake in Western Europe, cradle of our civilization. America's nuclear umbrella protects the nations of Europe; a third of a million of our troops are stationed there. All Americans, including 27 million who take pride in their Italian heritage, care deeply about what happens to democracy there.

That is why I am not in the least embarrassed to speak up for the free system I believe in. That is why I am willing to point to the consequences of Communist takeover—now, before it is too late.

Through its controlled press, the Soviet Union has warned the United States not to make its feelings known to our allies. I reject such hypocrisy.

Those were not American tanks that fired at freedom fighters in the streets of Budapest in 1956. Those were not American tanks that crushed the vain hopes of freedom in Czechoslovakia in 1968.

But the Soviet warning does prove this: Moscow is desperately anxious

ESSAY

for Western European Communists to succeed. When the chips are down, the pretense of "local party independence" disappears. Today, Moscow's Communists provide political and financial aid; tomorrow, they may well stand ready to provide military aid to crush resistance to "local" Communism.

We owe it to our Italian friends to say: We hope you will choose the form of government that makes it possible for you to keep choosing your own form of government. In a democratic election, anybody may win; in a Communist election, Communists always win. There is no such thing as "a little totalitarianism."

We owe it to our Italian friends to say: We are now bound by solemn treaty, ratified by the Senate of the United States, to treat an attack upon Italy as the same as an attack upon us. But if the nations of Europe begin to turn Communist, then no nation can say it was not informed of America's consequent need to re-examine that treaty. It has not been our policy to intervene in battles within the Communist world.

As President of a free people, speaking to the free people with whom we have so much in common, let me say this: The commitment of the United States to the defense of Western Europe is, as it has been, steadfast and unswerving. The spirit of NATO is the spirit of freedom, and as long as our allies hold that value foremost, Americans will be proud to stand with them.

Thank you and good night.

Profits, investments, and jobs

—What will it take for America to shrink unemployment to a tolerable level?

—What will it take for America to raise the living standards of those of its people still living in poverty?

—What will it take for America to remain competitive with foreign manufacturers?

—What will it take for America to provide jobs for a work force that's still growing at the rate of about 1.5 million a year?

—What will it take for America to be able to afford an expanding system of social benefits?

The answer: Increased investment by private business in new plants and machinery. This is what creates and maintains jobs and makes it possible to produce more goods faster, better, and at lower cost. A big factor in whether our economy is prosperous or depressed is the level of new private investment in such plants and machines.

The 1,200% misunderstanding

A business invests in new plants and equipment only when it thinks it can get an adequate return on that money. Most Americans have a greatly inflated conception of how much the average business earns from each dollar it takes in. Surveys have shown that people believe corporate profits range anywhere from 28% to 61% on the dollar—when the true figure for years has averaged around 5%.

With such massive misinformation, it's no wonder people think profits are excessive. The truth is that corporate profits after taxes, which amounted to nearly 10% of U.S. national income in 1950, amounted to only a little over 7% of it in 1974 and to an even smaller percentage in 1975.

People can think ill of profits and can have misconceptions as to how large profits are. But clearly, no company can long exist without profits. And if it cannot exist, it obviously cannot employ people. To take our company as one example, we are talking about 71,000 employees and their dependents, and about 229,000 shareholders and their dependents, and about all the employees and shareholders of the thousands of companies from which we buy—most of them small companies—and their dependents.

We are, of course, just one example. But the American people must comprehend that it is only profitable companies that create jobs and tax revenues and profits for other companies (and thus still more jobs and still more tax revenues). Without such comprehension, people's misconceptions of the size and role of profits can do real harm to our economy and thus to themselves.

U.S. Senator William Proxmire, anything but an apologist for big business, has made these perceptive comments:

"Somewhat the impression has developed in this country that corporate profits have been excessive.
The fact is they have not been...

"...profits in relation to other income have been in a steady decline for 25 years.

"...profits are now about half as large a proportion of wages and salaries as they were 25 years ago..."

"Profits are what drive this great economy. They provide the incentive for investment that is essential for acquiring the capital that in turn provides the technology that enables our country to grow more productive and efficient and support a higher standard of living. Profits also ensure the discipline that forces businessmen to hold down costs and organize their operations more and more efficiently.

"Also, if profits are too low, our economy cannot engender the capital essential for good jobs and an abundance of what we need for the good life."

The U.S.—ahead of Luxembourg!

That's just what's been happening. Since 1960 the United States has had the lowest level of capital investment in relation to Gross National Product of any of the major industrialized nations. As a direct result of this, our country tied for 17th place in real growth among the 20 most advanced economies during the Sixties—ahead only of Luxembourg and the United Kingdom—a fact as depressing as it is startling.

In short, we have been eating into our capital for many years. We can't keep this up much longer without doing real damage to our economy and to our standard of living, which will endanger all of our social programs.

investment."

F.P.C. WELCOMES PUBLIC TO SESSION

Open Meeting First Since Agency Convened in 1920

By EDWARD COWAN

WASHINGTON, April 21—The Federal Power Commission met today for the 7,375th time and for the first time opened its meeting to the public.

Since the first meeting on July 1, 1920, the commissioners have deliberated and voted with only staff lawyers and technicians present. Not even the agenda was known—officially, anyway—to the regulated natural gas and electric power industries or to the public.

Some 50 observers, mostly Washington lawyers for gas producers, pipelines and power companies, came to today's 10 A.M. meeting. Before it ended, after 2 hours 40 minutes of low-key debate and casual chitchat, mostly by the reading of the chairman, Richard L. Dunham—more than half the observers had left.

The lawyers, some F.P.C. staff aides and journalists who were present all said that they could not always hear the commissioners or staff officials. Nor could they always understand what they heard because they were not privy to the facts, analyses and draft orders that lay before each commissioner.

Old-Line Agencies

The power commission is the first of the old-line regulatory agencies to permit the public to attend its meetings. Under the Civil Aeronautics Board, which awards airline routes and regulates fares; the Federal Communications Commission, which awards valuable broadcasting licenses; or others will follow suit is unclear.

The power commission decided or deferred action on 30 agenda items listed individually. Of 40 others listed on the "consent" agenda as noncontroversial, it continued three, and approved staff recommendations for 37 with a single "en bloc" vote.

Don S. Smith, who has been a member of the commission since December 1973, or almost two years longer than anyone else, despite the greatest familiarity with technical issues, leaders have credited him with carrying the commission on his shoulders for months in 1975, when one or two seats were vacant and the then chairman, John N. Nassikas, was a lame duck.

Two members, James G. Watt and John H. Holloman 3d, showed that the open meetings may have a variety of uses. Mr. Holloman announced that the commission was considering a top-to-bottom review of its policy for sharing scarce natural gas supplies, so-called curtailment policy.

He also disclosed that a decision on a major curtailment case, involving a Southern natural gas company, would be issued within two weeks.

Tips About Decision

Mr. Holloman addressed these remarks to his brother commissioners, but plainly they were uttered for the benefit of the industry. Usually, the time when a big case is to be decided has been a secret, the kind that lawyers and executives sometimes try to learn from commissioners or officials they have courted for just such ends.

Mr. Watt used discussion of an electricity-pricing issue for the Connecticut Light and Power Company as an occasion for declaring that utilities needed to be allowed to earn bigger profits so that they could expand their generating facilities.

Mr. Watt said he wanted to give the Connecticut company the 13.16 percent return on equity that it requested, but he went along with the others in voting for a 12.25 percent return, more than the 11.47 percent recommended by the agency's staff. The case involved sales of power for the period January 1973 to September 1974 to the cities of Groton, Jewett City, Norwich, Norfolk (second and third taxing districts) and Wallingford.

The commissioners voted to give the Federal Trade Commission data on natural gas pricing and reserves that it sought for its investigation of possible anticompetitive practices in the natural-gas-producing industry and of the reliability of the producers' estimates of gas reserves in the ground.

When the issue came before the commission informally late in 1974, only Mr. Smith of the present members was then serving. The decision essentially reaffirmed the willingness of the commission to cooperate with the Federal Trade Commission.

Mr. Dunham, who as chairman presided over the commission that the power commission would accept the trade commission's own rules on confidentiality as adequate to protect the data to be made available. A staff official then requested the commission that in an earlier case it had required the trade commission to copy data by hand from power commission files.

The reason was to protect the power commission in case copies of the data came into unauthorized hands. After brief discussion, the commission accepted Mr. Dunham's assertion of confidence in the trade commission and deleted the copy-by-hand restriction.

Sam Pope Brewer Dead at 66; Times Foreign Correspondent

By EMANUEL PERLMUTTER

Sam Pope Brewer, a former correspondent for The New York Times in Europe and the newspaper's United Nations bureau until his retirement in 1972, died yesterday in Columbus Hospital after a heart attack. He lived at 201 East 21st Street and was 66 years old.

Mr. Brewer's long career as a foreign correspondent was marked by bravery under fire in World War II and censorship brushes with dictators. In 1941, he barely avoided death in Yugoslavia, where Serbian partisans arrested him as a German spy while he was covering the war there. They told him he would be shot, but finally released him when they were convinced that he was a correspondent.

He joined The Times in 1945 after having covered the war in Greece, and then with the British in the Middle East and India. He had also covered the Spanish Civil War for that paper and had worked for it in London and Madrid.

Before joining the Chicago paper, he had worked for The New York Herald Tribune and the Havas news agency both here and abroad. For The New York Times, he was assigned first to Cairo, then to Rumania, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Turkey and Italy. After a year of covering Spain and Portugal, he went back to the Middle East as the Times's chief correspondent there during the Israeli-Egyptian hostilities from 1947 to 1949.

Mr. Brewer figured unwittingly when he was stationed in Lebanon for The Times. He was then married to Eleanor Carolyn Keame. She became involved with Harold A. R. (Kim) Philby, who spied for the Soviet Union for 30 years while working as a British counterintelligence agent. Mr. and Mrs. Brewer were divorced in 1958, and she was soon married to Mr. Philby, following him to Moscow in 1953 after his defection to the Soviet Union. She is now deceased.

After Mr. Brewer's service in Palestine and the Arab countries, he returned to Spain and Portugal for two years before becoming The Times's chief correspondent in South America. He then returned to the newspaper's city staff before being assigned to the United Nations bureau. He was a fluent linguist, speaking French, Spanish and Turkish.

Mr. Brewer, who was born on Oct. 1, 1909, in Yorkville, was the son of Sam S. Brewer, a former reporter for The New York Sun, and Bessie Marsh Brewer, an etcher and lithographer. He attended the Phillips Exeter Academy; Yale University, from which he received an M.A. degree in 1935, and the University of Paris.

He is survived by his wife, the former Lis Wangli; a son, Joseph Goldstone, 34, a doctor; and a daughter, Mrs. Barbara Fox, 30, a nurse. He is also survived by a sister, Mrs. Lillian Wangli, and a nephew, Joseph Goldstone, 34, a doctor.

Retired President of Former Women's Specialty Store

David Fox, retired president of Jay Thorpe, the former women's specialty store, died yesterday at his home in Manhattan after a long illness. He was 90 years of age.

Mr. Fox, until his retirement in the mid-1930's, was a vice president of the Silver Fox Dress Company, now out of business. After retiring, Mr. Fox and his family moved to Paris, returning to the United States before World War II.

In July 1942, Mr. Fox returned to the United States, working in Jay Thorpe, which was at 24 West 57th Street. He was elected secretary and treasurer of the company and later president, a position he held until he retired in January 1962. That June the store closed.

In the 1930's, Mr. Fox also was a limited partner in the clothing firm of Sartorius, Engel & Company. Mr. Fox is survived by his wife, the former Estrella Goldstone; two daughters, Mrs. Arthur Ochs Sulzberger and Barbara Fox, both of New York City, and four grandchildren. There will be a private service.

F.D.A. CHALLENGED ON PLASTIC BOTTLE

Ecology Group Files Suit on Approval of Material

WASHINGTON, April 21—The Natural Resources Defense Council filed suit today against the Food and Drug Administration, challenging its interim approval of the use of acrylonitrile plastic for soft-drink bottles.

The council, an environmental law firm based in New York City, charged that, in giving the plastic bottles "interim approval" in November 1974, the drug agency violated the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act because there is "some reason to doubt their safety."

The "migration" of chemical substance from the plastic into the beverage, the council said, exposes consumers to possible health hazards, since the substance has not been "adequately tested" as a possible cancer hazard.

The bottles in question are those being test-marketed in the Providence, R.I., area by Coca-Cola Inc. Another plastic bottle, made of polyester and used by Pepsi-Cola, has been given permanent approval.

The F.D.A., in a statement replying to the announcement of the suit, said that acrylonitrile, or ACN, has been widely used for many years in food packaging—in cups for margarine and bread and cake trays, among other things.

Approved in 1970, it was approved by the drug agency in 1970 as an indirect food additive. Such approval is required for any substance coming into contact with the food it packages.

Tests in 1974, however, showed that "stressed bottles at 120 degrees Fahrenheit for six months indicated some migration" of ACN from the bottle into its contents. In November 1974, therefore, the substance was placed on an "interim" list, and limitations "on its use were proposed" to assure the drug agency said that "new long-term toxicological studies" were under way, and that the previously proposed standards, which set a tolerance of three parts-per-million, were expected to be "finalized" shortly.

Placing a substance on the "interim" list indicates that the new information has raised "substantial questions about its safety while leaving a 'reasonable' certainty" that it is not harmful.

Joseph M. Heckman, the general counsel to the Society of the Plastics Industry, said the charges were "essentially utter nonsense" unsupported by data and that there was "no reasonable expectation of migration."

Joseph Goldstone, 34, Doctor; Made House Calls Until 81. Dr. Joseph Goldstone, an East Side physician who continued to make house calls until he retired at the age of 81, died Tuesday in his residence at 1230 Park Avenue. He was 84 years old.

In 1971 he received 50-year service citations from Lenox Hill Hospital and the New York County Medical Society. A nationally syndicated newspaper feature described him as one of the last of "the old-style family physicians."

Dr. Goldstone, a native of Russia, received his medical degree at Columbia University's College of Physicians and Surgeons and was a medical officer in the United States Army from 1917 to 1919. Survivors include his wife, Hortense; a stepson, James Heilbrunn; a stepdaughter, Betty Benjamin; and a sister.

JOSEPH T. GALE. Joseph T. Gale, a retired New York theatrical booking agent, died of cancer Tuesday in Columbus, Ga., where he was spending the winter. He was 70 years old and lived in Deal, N. J.

For many years, Mr. Gale was president of the booking agency bearing his name. Among the stars that he and his brother, the late Moe Gale, represented were Hank Snow, Ella Fitzgerald, Errol Garner and Della Reese.

Mr. Gale is survived by his wife, the former Martha Lou Harp; and a brother, Dr. Conrad Gale of New York.

LEWIS D. ZEIDLER. Lewis D. Zeidler, who had been a professional tenor in his youth, and sang on radio, died yesterday in the Sands Point (L.I.) Nursing Home. He was 87 years old and lived in Port Washington, L.I.

Mr. Zeidler, who had sung regularly in the Metropolitan Opera chorus in the 1920's, was a president of the Apollo Club, a music group in Brooklyn. He leaves his wife, the former Helen Heydenreich; a son, Dr. Lewis Jr., from a previous marriage; and two grandchildren.

STUDY CHALLENGES 'WHITE FLIGHT' DATA

CHICAGO, April 21 (AP)—A recently released study for the Illinois Office of Education reports that white students do not flee racially mixed schools, but tend to remain enrolled in them.

The study, conducted by the Chicago-based R. LaSalle Research Corporation, appears to challenge a commonly held theory that once a certain level of minority students is reached in a school, most of the white students leave.

Anthony Downs, chairman of the company, said, "Once minorities appear in a neighborhood, it doesn't mean there's going to be a rapid increase in the loss of whites." He said that the study cast doubt on the theory of white flight from racially changing neighborhoods.

The study also said that in all but two of 40 sample schools studied in Illinois, minority enrollment did not affect academic achievement. The study did not consider pupil achievement test scores, but said that interviews with school officials had led the researchers to believe that academic performance was not hurt by integration.

The research company made a six-month survey of 743 of the 4,600 schools in the state. LEE LAWRIE JR. Lee Lawrie Jr., an architectural designer, died Sunday in Merritt Island, Fla., where he lived. He was 66 years old.

He assisted his father, Lee Lawrie, designer of the statue of Atlas on Fifth Avenue and other works in Rockefeller Center, on several projects. He was associated with Bertram Grosvenor Goodhue, New York architect.

Surviving are his wife, a son, a daughter, two brothers and a sister. JOHN M. RUSS. John Monroe Russ, a chemical engineer with the Union Carbide Corporation, died Sunday in Green-wood, Conn. He was 40 years old and lived in Old Greenwich, Conn.

Mr. Russ, a 1925 graduate of the University of Michigan, specialized in the development of plastics. He leaves his wife, the former Muriel Pool; three children from a previous marriage, Dr. Clarke Russ, Jean Chapman and Elizabeth Kaiser; a brother, a sister and three stepsons.

When no one responded, he persuaded Stackpole Sons, a printer in Harrisburg, Pa., to print a small edition, which he guaranteed with his own money. John Doe Passos wrote a preface. The stories of the 53 authors were written as ordinary themes in a six months' course in English composition he taught at the American University in Washington. The anthology gained respectful attention as "The Purple Testament" under the imprint of Doubleday & Company, in 1947.

Dr. Wolfe had a strong conviction that every man has a story to tell if he has the courage to dip deep into his life and shake the story loose. He found, however, that combat did not make a man a more intelligent citizen. The veterans, he determined, had a sympathy born of comradeship and humility born of suffering, "but their grappling with ideas was often very superficial."

Dr. Wolfe retired in 1973 after 27 years at Brooklyn College and 15 years at the New School. He was born in Parsons, West Va., and was graduated from Davis and Elkins College.

In 1945, he taught at Geneva College in Beaver Falls, Pa., where he coached basketball and once handled a team that upset Long Island University at Madison Square Garden. He and his wife, the former Mary Stormont, who survives, enjoyed camping and hiking.

In addition to editing many works on Milton, he edited "American Vanguard," a collection of 13 stories, parts and documents published in 1952; "Which Grains Will Grow," writings by students at the New School, and "Leverell Manifestos of the Puritan Revolution," a collection of pamphlets and tracts showing the struggle for constitutional government in England and the United States.

His other books included "The Image of Man in America," a sociological study published in 1957; "American Scene: New Voices," an anthology of hitherto unpublished writers, in 1963; and "Enjoying English," a series of textbooks.

He was a Fulbright professor of English in Bordeaux, France, in 1950-51, a Huntington Library Fellow in 1951-72. He was a founder of the Milton Society of America. Surviving also are a daughter, Sallie Notter of Boston; a brother, Glen Wolfe of Washington; a sister, Mrs. Frances Elliott of Houston, and two grandchildren.

JOSEPH WALKER JR., INVESTMENT BANKER

Joseph T. Walker Jr., who retired in 1963 as a limited partner in Hornblower & Weeks-Hempfling, Noyes Inc., investment house, died of cancer Tuesday evening in New London (N.H.) Hospital. He was 80 years old and lived in New London.

Mr. Walker left his classes at Yale in 1917 to join the American Field Service, and then joined the French Foreign Legion, in which he became an artillery officer. On his discharge in 1919, he resumed his classes at Yale and earned a B.A. as of the Class of 1918.

He served Merrill Oldham & Company, Boston; Brown Brothers, Harriman & Company and the National Shawmut Bank of Boston before, in 1934, joining Hornblower & Weeks, which was later merged with Hempfling, Noyes.

He leaves his wife, the former Agnes E. Knickerbocker, the widow of H. R. Knickerbocker, the foreign correspondent; children of his earlier marriage, Timothy, Thomas and Sarah Alice Thomson; his wife's children, Julia Knickerbocker, Miranda Sorrell-Booker and Suzanne Nelson; a sister, and 15 grandchildren.

Sisters With $5,300 and Dead of Starvation

By FRANK J. FRIAL
As of two elderly of the four locks on the door, and starved, were Brooklyn apartment.

Neighbors said that the sisters had had a special police lock installed several months ago, and that it had balked several attempted break-ins.

Minister's Efforts
The Rev. Waldo Manley of St. Mary's Episcopal Church on Classon Avenue, which the sisters attended for many years, said yesterday that he had attempted to persuade them to move to a nursing home and that he had made arrangements for them at a home on Long Island just a week ago.

"They wouldn't leave the apartment," he said. Neighbors said the two women had lived in the apartment as long as anyone could remember, and that their parents had once lived there too.

Mr. Manley was reached through papers found in the Dufon apartment naming him the guardian of their estate which, police said, was worth about $56,000 in addition to the cash and checks found strewn around their bodies.

The minister, now semiretired and attached to St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Forest Hills, Queens, said that both women had worked when they were younger, but that neither had any savings.

Lillie Clark, who lives on the same floor as the sisters' apartment, said she frequently checked on them because they had appeared to deteriorate rapidly in the last two years.

"I knew they had no light or heat in there," Mrs. Clark said, "and that they ate potato chips and things from cans. I began to wonder about them last Friday because I hadn't seen them for a few days."

"On Saturday morning, about a quarter to 10, I knocked on their door and said: 'This is Mrs. Clark. Do you want me to go to the store for you?'" The older sister mumbled something behind the door so I figured they were all right.

Other tenants described the sisters as gregarious and kind and seemingly much younger than their actual age—until recent months.

"You used to see them walking around the neighborhood in an arm," said Julia Brown. "They went out every day because they only bought enough to eat for one meal at a time."

EMERGENCY CONFERENCE: Consolidated Edison workers huddling at First Avenue and 41st Street yesterday after a steam pipe at a generating plant broke in half with a roar around noon, sending steam shooting 75 feet into the air. Damage to a bypass valve was repaired an hour later.

'Poetry Wall' Comes Alive At Cathedral of St. John

By ELEANOR BLAU
Dean Morton in turn read a poem Miss Rukeysers had written, called "St. Roach," and she praised the dean's delivery.

With a procession, some speeches and plenty of "stikcum," Muriel Rukeysers, the poet, and James P. Morton, dean of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, yesterday inaugurated the cathedral's "poetry wall."

Last February they had announced creation of the wall—actually two facing stone surfaces—where anyone in the world who wrote a poem could have it displayed. Since then, they have received about 600 poems from all over the country, as well as from the West Indies and Europe.

As eager boys and girls from the Cathedral School took turns scrambling up a ladder to paste the first batch, Miss Rukeysers offered suggestions, such as "Don't put them up so straight, put them up every which way" and "I want them to fly."

"Care Very Much"
On the other hand, she said, "I care very much about the fitness, the exactness of poetry," and so, periodically, certain poems will be selected for special attention.

Called "Runes," the unpublished poem, enlarged, was displayed on both walls, near the cathedral's Chapel of St. James, and read by Miss Rukeysers.

would insure school financing and leave the Governor and the Legislature with the problem of finding enough money to pay for other state programs.

Mr. Byrne said today that if the court was waiting for the Senate to act before saying what it intended to do, "it shouldn't wait."

He said the wide range of alternatives allows the Senators to speculate that the court might choose something that wouldn't greatly inconvenience their home districts and that while the Senators were allowed to speculate they would not make up their mind about the tax.

Rent-Control Tenants May Get Reductions

Tenants in 360,000 rent-controlled New York City apartments are likely to see their rents reduced by up to $9 a month beginning July 1, the City Council leadership indicated yesterday.

This would take place if the city did not renew a one-year program, now scheduled to expire June 30, that permitted owners of the apartments to collect special, rent rises to offset higher fuel costs in recent years.

Yesterday, Thomas J. Cuite, the City Council majority leader, and Aileen B. Ryan, head of the Council's General Welfare Committee, said they could see no reason at this time for renewing the so-called fuel-cost pass-along beyond its scheduled expiration on June 30.

Among other things, as artists' kneading graser and "plastic stikcum," they will testify to the fact that, as Miss Rukeysers put it, "the air of this place is full of poems."

Grand Central Partisans Fight Against a Tower

"This is the famous view of New York City since 1913," said the tour guide looking up Park Avenue at the sinuous sculptures and lines of Grand Central Terminal spread against the stark Pan Am Building.

The Committee to Save Grand Central Station runs a free tour through the terminal every Wednesday at 12:30 P.M. in an effort to raise public concern over the Beaux-Arts landmark, which the organization contends is threatened by Penn Central's plans to build a tower atop it.

"My single social passion is Grand Central Station," said Gary Pomeroy, who is writing a novel about New York. He joined the tour of 40 people during his lunch hour.

The group looked down at the marble floors of the concourse and up at the turquoise ceiling covered with golden zodiac designs. A ramp led to the waiting room, where Val Ginter, the tour guide, said, "If this ceiling were made of glass we could see Johnny Carson and Robert Redford playing a million private lives."

VERMONT BECKONS FLEEING INDUSTRY

Gov. Salmon Meets With 20 Businessmen for Lunch at World Trade Center

By MICHAEL STERNE
Gov. Thomas P. Salmon of Vermont came to town yesterday to woo New York-area manufacturers and said that "we are putting our money where our mouth is" to make the state more attractive to industry.

He then outlined an industrial development program of cheap loans, tax reductions, factory construction, job training and environmental improvements that he said was making Vermont a center for modern manufacturing without sacrifice of its bucolic charm.

Mr. Salmon is one of scores of Governors who year-round recruit new jobs and enterprises for their states as avidly as they seek votes at election time. He got a friendly reception from 20 businessmen who, for a variety of reasons, are thinking of establishing plants outside the metropolitan area.

Nationwide Competition
By the estimate of the United States Commerce Department, more than 15,000 state and local promotional organizations are competing for the 400 major plant relocations that are made in the country each year.

Among the area businessmen who had a buffet lunch of quiche, Vermont cheeses and salad with Governor Salmon in the World Trade Center offices of the New England Regional Commission was Roy Arroll, president of the Diplomat-Envelope Corporation of Long Island City, Queens.

Mr. Arroll said he was seeking an escape from the high wages, taxes and operating costs that were making it more and more difficult for him to compete successfully with other manufacturers. He complained bitterly of the impact of city union wage contracts on his labor costs, citing a skilled die cutter, whom he had been paying $14,000 a year, who quit because he could make more collecting garbage for the Sanitation Department.

Reasons for Moving
Douglas E. Kellogg, president of Blackstone Industries, a hand-tool manufacturer of Bethel, Conn., said he was considering a move because he now found himself operating in the state's "high-rent district."

The migration of many corporate headquarters to Fairfield County, he said, has pushed up labor and other costs, and recently he had to pay $35,000 for a half acre of land to expand his employees' parking lot.

Ronald Peterson, head of a new solar heating systems division of the Gruman Aerospace Corporation, said the high cost of transporting the systems from the company's plant at Bethpage, L. I., to a developing New England market might lead Gruman to establish a factory in Vermont.

And Peter Zecker, head of Multiple Precision Controls, of Midland Park, N. J., said preliminary studies had shown that savings on taxes, because of Vermont's low corporate tax rate, and services produced in Vermont in 1973, he said, 26 percent came from manufacturing, less than 13 percent from tourism and less than 5 percent from agriculture.

Suspect Seized After Firing at Police
Ricardo Vera, 42 years old, of Brooklyn, was seized at 1 A.M. after an exchange of gunfire with three plainclothes police officers at Flushing and Clermont Avenues in the Williamsburg section. The police said the officers, while on anticrime patrol, encountered Mr. Vera just after he had allegedly fired a pistol at two officers during an argument outside a bar, missing both. When the officers identified themselves, Mr. Vera reportedly fired twice at them, missing again. The officers returned 13 shots, none of which struck Mr. Vera, who fled but was seized when he fell a short distance away.

Jeweler Indicted in $5 Million Fraud
Howard E. Saff, a former jewelry company president, was indicted by a Federal jury in Manhattan on charges of fraudulently obtaining loans of more than $5 million, most of it from four banks. The 23-count Federal indictment indicated that most of the money was used to operate Mr. Saff's company, Adley Jewelry, which later went bankrupt. The indictment also alleged that Mr. Saff diverted $448,000 of company funds for his own use, including $200,000 to remodel an elaborate house he owned on Ocean Avenue in East Hampton, L.I.

Connecticut Law on Stolen Property
Gov. Ella T. Grasso of Connecticut has signed a bill that is supposed to make it easier for a person to get back property held by the police as evidence in a crime. The measure, effective Oct. 1, authorizes the owner of stolen property to ask a court to order authorities to return it. If the property is valued at less than $50 it can be given to the owner immediately.

From the Police Blotter:
An argument between a woman identified as Katherine Brown, 30 years old, of 1180 Forest Avenue, the Bronx, and a man, Bobby Allen, 37, of the same address, led to a double shooting on a fourth-floor landing of the apartment house. The police said the man was in critical condition with wounds of the abdomen and the woman in good condition with a chest wound. The police said they had recovered two guns. . . . Two men wearing red ski masks, one armed with what turned out to be a fake pistol, held up Nathanson Brothers, a jewelry concern at 15 West 47th Street, and escaped with what the police said were diamonds worth $200,000. The fake gun was found after the robbers fled.

Drive to Place Leone Unit Post Said to Falter

By RONALD SULLIVAN
Special to The New York Times
April 21—A drive opposition from New York members of the commission, while Governors each appoint six commission members, Governor Byrne has only appointed three of New Jersey's members so far, and Mr. Carey has appointed only one, thus giving the Republican-appointed incumbent members from both states considerable political independence.

Opposition to Mr. Leone, 23 years old, appears to stem most from his reputation as a strong advocate of the public interest and his commitment to a larger mass-transit role for the Port Authority. Old-line financial interests have tended to dominate Port Authority policy over the years.

The leading opponents of Mr. Leone were said to include Gustave L. Levey, president of Goldman Sachs Inc., New York investment bankers, and James C. Helmuth, a vice president of the Bankers Trust New York Corporation.

Along with Dr. Roman and two other New York appointees that Christopher Dietz, chairman of the State Parole Board, had agreed to withdraw subpoenas he issued for records for 3,000 inmates to determine how many ineligible inmates might have been paroled or recommended for parole.

The Pop Life

3 British Groups Cut New Rock Disks

By JOHN ROCKWELL

Rock may not be as significant or as trendy as it once was, but it still sells. At the moment three of the leading British groups have new records out, with Paul McCartney and Wings' "Wings at the Speed of Sound" and Led Zeppelin's "Presence" already top sellers and the Rolling Stones' brand-new "Black and Blue" presumably heading for the top as well.

Mr. McCartney seems to have had his fill of significance during his Beatle days, and settled in his solo career for the straightforward production of "disposable" pop. "Some people want to fill the world with silly love songs," he sings on this new disk. "And what's wrong with that? I'd like to know!"

"Wings at the Speed of Sound" has been greeted in some quarters as a disappointing throwaway after the more ambitious "Venus and Mars." As far as this listener is concerned, the new disk is a more refreshing testimony to Mr. McCartney's current skills and ambitions than the earlier, more pretentious effort was.

"Presence," similarly, represents a return to unadorned rock after a more ambitious previous album, the two-disk "Physical Graffiti."

Led Zeppelin can make affecting, unusual and exciting music, when it wants to. But the rhythm section and the general atmosphere seem lead-footed for those who like buoyance and excitement in their music. On "Presence" there is one sure-fire crowd pleaser, "Candy Store Rock," and some energetic guitar playing from Jimmy Page. But the whole thing just sort of sits there, sullenly.

The new Stones album is clearly transitional. Although Ron Wood's face adorns the cover with the four original members, the main recording for "Black and Blue" took place in Munich (at the same studio where "Presence" was recorded) before last year's American tour and Mr. Wood appears only sporadically.

The key outside influence is Billy Preston, the keyboard showman, who is not this observer's favorite. Still, Mr. Preston is far better to listen to than to look at, and for all its unevenness this is the only album of the three under discussion that is likely to provide continuous pleasure over the years.

Or at least its best cuts will. The opening disk number, the reggae tune "and even the already-much-praised 'Memory Motel' on the first time seem lesser Stones songs, although 'Hand of Fate' is a typical Jagger-Richard rocker, intensely satirical and 'part' for its very familiarity.

Things pick up on side 2, with a catchy disco tune, the haunting 'Foot to Cry' (available as a single) and the final 'Crazy Mama,' with its lovely ascending guitar runs from Mr. Richard. Even the Preston-inspired, scathing 'Melody' works decently, although one doubts it will wear particularly well.

Through it all, the Stones demonstrate two attributes that lift them above both Wings and Led Zeppelin, one tangible and one intangible. The tangible one is a sense of rhythm, a catlike lightness and exactitude of phrasing that the others can't match. The intangible one is a sense of passion and commitment. Perhaps that's not to your taste — perhaps you prefer the amiable pop of Wings or the thick-tongued truculence of Led Zepp. And perhaps the Stones' commitment has eroded from their great days in the 1960's. But there is still enough to make "Black and Blue" the best of these three examples of present-day rock.

Paul Simon is not dangling the prospect of scores of dazzling surprise guests at his benefit concert for the New York Public Library on May 3 at Madison Square Garden. The event was organized by Mr. Simon, after he had agreed to participate in a higher-priced event at the Metropolitan Opera on May 9, and will include the Beatles' Phoebe Snow and Jimmy Cliff, plus one possible guest.

Later on Mr. Simon will be a guest himself, with a scheduled cameo appearance in a feature film. After that he plans to compose a narrative "musical movie," from which an album should emerge. "I'll probably sing some of the songs on it, but it's too early to say," he reported yesterday.

The Stage: 'Streamers'

Rabe Brings Vietnam Trilogy to a Close

By CLIVE BARNES

With "Streamers," which opened last night at the Mitzzi E. Newhouse Theater, David Rabe brings to a conclusion his Vietnam trilogy, which began with "The Basic" and continued with "Sticks and Bones." In some ways, this is the best play of the trio, although, surprisingly perhaps, it is the most conventional, the least adventurous. But it has a dramatic power and, more significant, a dramatic idea that is absolutely a knockout.

What is violence? What is the concatenation of violence — what is the domino effect? No, not in Southeast Asia but in the ordinary, deadly practices of everyday life? What are the promptings of seemingly illogical murder — the moment when mind and hands become derelict and irrational?

"Streamers" was first given by the Long Wharf Theater in New Haven last month, directed by Mike Nichols. Mr. Nichols, in this transfer for the New York Shakespeare Festival, has tightened the production slightly and made a few changes of cast. The results are notably improved — indeed, what seemed a fine staging in New Haven, looks exemplary in New York.

The play is oddly compelling — at first sight it seems like one of those World War II barrack-room dramas, full of bad language and worse machismo, with all the men showing lovable oddity and all too human vulnerability. But Mr. Rabe's purpose is to show the faces of violence. He takes the interlocking themes of two minorities — homosexuals and blacks — and indicates the sudden awful pressures that can detonate a disaster.

He offers as his symbol, the army parachutist who careens to the ground when his parachute — for no very apparent reason — fails to open and becomes, in army lingo, a "streamer." We are all, Mr. Rabe is suggesting, subject to streamers, as people and — remember the moral

Unusual Piano Prog

Played by James I

By RAYMOND ERICSON

James Dick, a Texas pianist who made a much admired debut in Carnegie Hall last season, played an unusual program in Town Hall on Tuesday night, one that might be described with the advertising slogan "curiously refreshing." He exchanged his recitalistic pieces that are not performed in concert very often, although they are the stock in trade of the piano-teaching profession.

The older works were Grieg's Sonata in E minor and a quartet of pieces by MacDowell. Despite its four conventional movements, the sonata is no heavyweight. It is not even hard technically. But it has a lively Romantic gusto and some of the sweet lyricism that is a hallmark of the Norwegian composer's best music.

From the MacDowell repertoire, Mr. Dick chose the "March, Wind" Etude, the Concert Etude (Op. 36), "To an Old White Pine" and "Witches' Dance," which is practically an étude. The études are among the composer's most fallow, and it could not be said that they are so pianistic and colorful without being as poetically and especially pretentious as some of his other pieces are.

There was also a much closer little Ricer Tocatta, which he wrote in 1949 and a short theme from Old Maid and the T. Benjamin Lees's Son of 1956, a well-made, a conservative, progressively energetic piece. These are pieces not read by pianists, who had by his brief Sonata (Op. 78), but they, too, to hear occasion.

Mr. Dick was pleased that did not have conditioning running the heat and humidity obviously making board terribly slippery, who had in his fingers, wa ways able to dig keys as firmly as a rate playing, anywa.

He brought a f stonate style to f although his legs too slow for the s that he had in his could not believe that simplicity, the dancelike character, highly charged Le Mr. Dick was in his other pieces are.

pattern of this Vietnam trilogy — as a nation. Violence is, indeed, as American as apple pie.

Mr. Nichols has directed the play as briskly and as efficiently as an army drill sergeant at basic training. Yet he has never forgotten the interplay and intercutting of Mr. Rabe's characters, the rich homosexual, the bright boy, the tolerant black, the bad black and two fat old sergeants, dim with alcohol and numbed with emptiness. All these are put together as an ensemble, and the result is engrossing. We seem to be watching real people rather than stage characters, and, as a result — which is helped by Tony Walton's bleak designing — the melodramatic burst of blood at the end becomes as credible as a street accident.

The acting proved first rate. Paul Rudd's decently bewildered all-America kid, Terry Alexander's persuasive new-look young blackie, easy, tolerant but no Uncle Tom, Peter Evans's neurotic homosexual were all fine, as were the poetically sullen sergeants, Kenneth McMillan and Dolph Sweet. But what helped give the play a different dimension from the Long Wharf production was Dorian Harewood as the mean black, Carlyle. He was particularly brilliant in a case that had no flaws.

Mr. Rabe has produced an unusually well-made play, and Mr. Nichols has staged it with understanding and subtlety. In the past — and even in the New Haven production of this play — Mr. Nichols's virtuosity as a director has been showing like a slip. Not here. At last you have to think about his brilliance — it does not emerge in neon lights.

Film: Crime and Passion

Passer Movie Is Based on Novel by Chase

By VINCENT CANBY

The talent of Ivan Passer, the Czechoslovak director-writer who has been living in this country in recent years, is very real but so finely tuned that it can be thrown off by mundane things, like a magnetic compass disoriented by a passing garbage truck. Though Mr. Passer has a poet's eye for unexpected details and associations, and though he's a risk-taker, his is not a fragile talent. When he makes a mistake, it's a whopper.

"Crime and Passion," which opened yesterday at neighborhood theaters, is such a film, a grossly disoriented and disorienting shaggy-dog of a movie that seems to have no point, and no point of view, whatever.

Based on a James Hadley Chase novel that I haven't read, it's a somewhat black comedy about a neurotic international financial consultant (Omar Sharif), who, when things are going bad for him, has seizures of sexual passion for any woman he meets. It's also about his loyal assistant, played by Karen Black, whom he marries off to an eccentric German millionaire in a scheme to defraud the bridegroom.

The settings include a posh European resort and an ancient German castle, while the ghost of a headless knight and an elaborate television monitoring system (in the castle) are among the props.

What it's meant to be, I cannot tell. A comedy, melodrama, spoof? There are moments when you might think you are watching one of those stateless exercises that Roman Polanski likes to make occasionally, a movie that seems peculiarly decadent because it has no discernible national identity. This I suspect to be a false reading because everything that Mr. Passer has ever done, including his American-made "Born to Win" and "Law and Disorder," is the work of a director of profound sensitivity. In "Crime and Passion" the talent has been thrown off — wildly.

Houston Symphony Performs Sp

The Houston Symphony Orchestra's concert at Carnegie Hall on Tuesday night was the orchestra's first in New York in three years, and, as such, presumably reflects the state of the ensemble under Lawrence Foster, the young, Los Angeles-born conductor who has led it for five years.

Naturally, two programs are carefully selected and rehearsed to show off an orchestra at its best. On Tuesday, the Houston players' eagerness to spill into every crevice of the Carnegie Hall stage, and they made a big bold sound to match.

This was not playing especially impressive for individual excellence or for tonal refinement and sheen. But the Houston Symphony is clearly a first-rate group.

Mr. Foster's approach to the music complemented the impression of the orchestra itself. He does not seem the most poetic or individual of interpreters. But his sense of the music is solid and effective in its broad outlines, and at its best — as in the lovely, simple songfulness of the slower movements of Mahler's Symphony No. 4 — he and the orchestra were most persuasive.

His accompaniment in the Bartok Violin Concerto No. 2 was similarly effective, supportive without lapsing into impersonality. But his accounts of Berlioz's "Benvenuto Cellini" Overture and much of the Mahler sounded

Singers at Two Clubs

Work in Adapted Styles

Kelly Garrett
Like the Average White Band and a few other English purveyors of soul music, Robert Palmer has absorbed an American black idiom and can work within it in a relatively unaffected manner. Unlike the more popular Average White Band, which confines itself to the soul mainstream, Mr. Palmer flavors his music with African and Afro-Caribbean rhythms.

But no matter how idiomatically Mr. Palmer sings his original and borrowed material, problems remain. He has submerged himself so deeply in his adopted identity that his personality has been lost. And by choosing to work without backing vocalists, he courts a sameness that tends to make every song sound like the one that preceded it.

If he had additional singers to provide variety and drama and give his voice some rest, Mr. Palmer would be more effective in a club, like the Bottom Line, where he appeared on Tuesday and Wednesday. He is a fine, emotional singer, with good control and an effective steamy backup band, but over all his work seems far removed from its cultural content and leaves this reviewer, no relation to the performer, somewhat cold.

ROBERT PALMER

Ballet: Nureyev's Magic

By ANNA KISSELGOFF

Suddenly, even violently, the old Nureyev magic has returned in the way we have not seen it recently, and with all the torrential force that made it famous in the first place.

At the Metropolitan Opera House on Tuesday night Rudolf Nureyev and Merle Park took over the title roles in the Royal Ballet's "Romeo and Juliet," and they gave a magnificent performance. To be brutally candid, this should have been the first-night cast.

If Mr. Nureyev has sometimes failed to deliver the goods in the last two years, this is because he has always been measured by the self-imposed high standards that have placed him in a special category.

With superhuman strength, he now appears to have pulled himself back into the legendary original image. The dancing has its old brilliance and technique, the artistry its unique eye-riveting magnetism.

There is one other inescapable conclusion. And that is that nowhere does this extraordinary dancer look better than with the Royal Ballet. On this occasion, he was also teamed with a great ballerina and aided and abetted by the new superb interpretation of the new superb interpretation of the new superb interpretation.

Above all, it was a cast led by two pros, and if Kenneth MacMillan's version of "Romeo and Juliet" was brought to life so vividly this time it was because Miss Park and Mr. Nureyev made a dramatic detail meaningful and clear. Their characterization took the struck-down-by-fate approach.

This meant that the early scenes were marked by Mr. Nureyev's hot-blooded countenance and Miss Park's radiant but dutiful daughter. Brilliantly and shrewdly the balcony pas de deux built into a crescendo of passion, and the bedroom duet was impressive because it was simple rather than melodramatic.

So much of the colorful instant-by-instant byplay of this performance was also provided in the secondary roles. Adrian Grater's idea that Tybalt was the strong silent type had its power. And certainly Mr. Wall's refusal to take the usual "It's nothing, boys," view of Mercutio's death conveyed the true Shakespearean flavor of a plague upon both houses.

Publication of the March figures enabled the Social Security Administration to calculate, and announce, that the automatic cost-of-living benefit increase for Social Security recipients this year, to begin with the July benefit payment, will be 6.4 percent. The increase is based on the rise in prices from the first quarter of 1975 to the first quarter of 1976.

In January, the Administration forecast a rise in prices of about 6 percent this year. While economic officials are now hopeful that the figure will be lower, they do not expect the first-quarter performance to be maintained.

Trend in Food Prices... In the food area, there are already signs, particularly in the livestock markets, that the recent drop in prices has come to an end. The March index continued to show drops in meat prices, with beef prices alone down 10 percent in the February-March period.

As for gasoline and other petroleum-related products, increases have already been announced for gasoline prices this month by many major producers at the beginning of the period. In addition, the energy law passed by Congress and signed by the President late last year permits a gradual increase in the controlled price of domestic crude oil.

A good indicator of the "underlying" rate of inflation in the goods sector of the economy is provided by the price increase for all goods other than food.

This index rose three-tenths of 1 percent in March, exactly in line with the average for the six preceding months. This suggests an inflation rate in the range of 3.5 to 4 percent, which is consistent with the movement of the nonfood part of the Wholesale Price Index.

Juvenile Justice in New York Is Characterized as 'Futility'

By JOSEPH B. TREASTER

There were 99 robberies, in each case a juvenile was arrested and taken to Family Court. But when the legal proceedings were finished, only two of the 99 youths were sent to a reform school.

In studying these cases, analysts found that the youths involved had been arrested an average of 10 times for serious crimes and some of them had been in court more than 100 times.

This is a record of total futility, the counsel to the New York State Select Committee on Crime, Jeremiah B. McKenna, told a conference of the juvenile delinquency yesterday at the John Jay College of Criminal Justice.

There's no way in the world the Family Court could handle that many cases, Mr. McKenna said, adding, "We have come to the conclusion that the Family Court system as it is presently structured cannot handle the juvenile-crime problem."

Mr. McKenna's audience of some 100 juvenile specialists from the city and across the state had come together for two days of discussion at John Jay College in general agreement with his stern assessment of the Family Court and the juvenile justice system as a whole, which a recent review by a Governor's commission called a "nonsystem."

Where they were at odds, however, was in their approaches to a remedy. As one speaker followed another, it was clear that a major cleavage among the experts centered on the rising cry from the public to get tough with youths committing violent crimes.

At present, the system aims to rehabilitate rather than punish, although achievement of this goal has almost universally failed. In the meantime, the maximum that a youth can be sent away from his neigh-hood for such offenses as burglary, arson and rape is 18 months. A number of bills pending before the State Legislature would provide for such things as sentencing youths for the most serious crimes to reform schools for five years or more and for lowering the upper age limit of juveniles from 16 to 14 so that youths could be dealt with earlier in the adult system.

On the other hand, Elizabeth T. Schack, the director of the Juvenile Institute of the New York State Division of Criminal Services, lamented the harsh response as heralding "one of the most destructive periods for children that this country has seen in the 20th century."

Shakespeare Anatomized in Capital

By ISRAEL SHENKER

WASHINGTON, April 21—Alas poor Shakespeare, a fellow of infinite tests, and now submitted to the final dignity of an international congress. In the Bicentennial year, fate's iron whim dictated a title—"Shakespeare in America"—and deposited those who would worship and others who would wonder here on the shores of the Potomac. Lord Hailsham, distinguished Lord Chancellor, came ashore to hail Shakespeare as "one of the greatest magicians of English speech," and to warn that a society that neglects such treasures as Shakespeare "is ultimately a society which is going the way of Carthage and not of Rome."

There was applause from the groundlings, those who had arrived for the first day of the weeklong conference, which ends Saturday, and which has been meeting at the Statler-Hilton and at the Folger Shakespeare Library. When he looked to Shakespeare's future, Lord Hailsham saw the same old English—alphabet inadequate, spelling capricious, grammar unnerving—in glory estranged. He suggested that a conservative Lord—that Shakespeare might be immortal for another five or six centuries.

Prof. Samuel Schoenbaum, a Shakespeare scholar at the City University of New York, singled out Shakespeare as the only playwright of the past still universally popular. "You can't say that about the Greeks or Racine or even Molière," he insisted. For many years, Professor Schoenbaum was at Northwestern University, and when he gave his last course there on Shakespeare, 300 students signed up. "The only course I ever gave that had a bigger enrollment was 'Horror Films,'" he said.

Audience for the Macabre: Alistair Cooke, in the inaugural address at the Folger Library, suggested that Shakespeare gained initial popularity in America last century before tough audiences that wanted "murders and ghosts and sleepwalkings, and a noisy suffocation of Desdemona." One 19th-century group of Seminoles, in an unparalleled case of critical everkill, butchered a whole company of Shakespearean actors.

At the opening of the Folger show on two centuries of Shakespeare in America, idolaters slipped punch and observed relics such as a letter from John Quincy Adams, characteristically circumspict, suggesting Hamlet was surely "the Master Piece of Shakespeare"—had almost said the Master Piece of the Human Mind. Also shown was Lincoln's copy of "The Dramatic Works of William Shakespeare," but not a trace of that estimable Shakespearean villain, John Wilkes Booth.

"I'm sure there's somebody here who thinks we should be honoring the Earl of Oxford or Christopher Marlowe," suggested Prof. Maynard Mack of Yale University, president of the Shakespeare Association of America. "The Earl of Oxford is the favorite of bankers and lawyers. Two lawyers some years ago published a book putting the Oxford case as strongly and as absurdly as it's possible to do, following in the footsteps of Thomas Looney, pioneer of the school."

Professor Mack looked about warily, explaining: "At gatherings like this you're always in danger of some swagger—dress of brocade, jewels galore, fanatic glint in her eyes—who's an Ox-wortite or a Marlowite. You can tell as soon as you see her bearing down on you." "Baconians throw bombs," warned the University of Münster's Prof. Marvin Spevack, who produced the giant Shakespeare concordance. He is now working on SHAD, an acronym for a vast Shakespeare dictionary anatomizing Shakespeare's vocabulary in more ways than ars dreamt of in past philology. C. T. Onions, for example, many years ago cooked up "a Shakespeare glossary" that concentrated on unusual words, but only Professor Spevack knew for sure—on the basis of chronological and computer analysis—which words were new coinage.

Prof. Harry Levin of Harvard University warned against letting Shakespeare's work appear "lapseless," and cautioned against the approach that explains away apparent error in favor of "real meaning," or the ironic approach, which reverses apparent values to deliver Shakespeare morally inflexible. "Love those lapses," he suggested, for how can one appreciate merit without recognizing fault?

For iconoclasts, for the faithful, and for those who wander from pole to pole, arguments cascaded from a bewilderment of sessions devoted to Shakespeare's audience, actors, contemporaries, women, comedies, romances, images, orthodoxies and reforms. There were Shakespeare films and Shakespeare plays, and collections of Shakespeare in art, books, records and cassettes,

Houghton Mifflin Shakespeare buttons proclaiming "Will Power" and Folger saleswomen in Shakespeare T-shirts. Critical broadsides, illusive details, triumphant esoterica—everything to confuse the senses and confound the understanding—was gathered into one capital scene. "I wonder how many persons present can remember simply experiencing and enjoying a Shakespeare tragedy," mused another scholar, "as against remembering what somebody else said about it? What you yourself will say about it next time around?" He resigned himself to the worst, noting that "the critics, like the poor, are here to stay."

Spain Lends 8 Goyas for Bicentennial

"The Naked Maja" and "The Clothed Maja," photographed yesterday in Washington, are among the eight paintings by Francisco de Goya being lent by the Spanish Government.

contemporary of Thomas Jefferson, was born in 1746 and died in 1828.

All eight paintings hang in the Prado in Madrid. The National Gallery itself has 11 Goyas. About 700 of his paintings are extant.

J. Carter Brown, the National Gallery's director, said he had asked the Spaniards if the group of paintings they were offering could include the "majas," and to my utter amazement, they said yes.

Earlier Attempts He said that the eight paintings carried "a double or triple freight," in that they were both representative of Goya's artistic development and that they had another, nonartistic, significance. One, "Carlos III as Huntsman," shows a benevolent and enlightened monarch; another is a portrait of Gaspar Melchor de Jovellanos, Spanish Minister of Justice and a friend of the artist, whose liberal political sympathies he shared.

Mr. Brown said he had "no way of knowing" if the paintings would have been lent during the lifetime of Generalissimo Francisco Franco, the Spanish dictator who died last year. In the past, he said, "we had flirted with the idea" of borrowing such paintings, but that nothing had come of whatever negotiations there were. The group of paintings does not include one of Goya's most famous and political works, the execution scene known as "The Third of May." Mr. Brown, asked if this omission had any significance, said, "We didn't ask for it."

In addition to the two

"Majas," the paintings to be lent are "The Amateur Bullfight," "The Injured Mason," "Witch and Wizard," "The Colossus of Pantic," "Gaspar Melchor de Jovellanos" and "Carlos III."

The cost of transporting the paintings and of insuring them is being borne by the Spanish Government, the gallery said.

GOING OUT Guide

EARTHLINGS Commenting on a performance by the group called the Chieftains two years ago at London's Albert Hall, The Times of that city called the musicians "without parallel." It added that the seven Irish steeped in a tradition of airs, jigs, hornpipes, reels and hoary songs that all they can do is evoke green travellings in your eye and ear.

New Yorkers last heard the Chieftains when they supplied the evocative musical soundtrack of the movie "Barry Lyndon."

These exponents of their homeland's traditional music have a local stopover tonight at 8 at Carnegie Hall, in their second national American tour. Novices to the group can expect some indigenous Irish sounds on picturesque instruments: the tin whistle, uilleann pipes, bodhran, flute, bodhran, concertina, dulcimer, bones and the more familiar Irish harp, fiddle and flute. Tickets are $5 to $8.

FULL BLOOM Like Sergei Rachmaninoff and his Prelude in C-sharp minor, the Australian-American composer Percy Grainger is unfortunately best-known for his simple, jolly "Country Gardens." But there is considerably more to his music, in experimental compositions and works for unusual instrumental combinations, as a program tonight at 8 by the Performers' Committee for Twentieth-Century Music will demonstrate at Columbia University's McMillin Theater, Broadway and 116th Street.

In reviewing this series of retrospective concerts on European and American composers, The New York Times called them "excellent and valuable composer surveys, superbly arranged."

Tonight's concert of neglected Grainger works portends a lively evening, with singers, dancers, chamber ensembles and the Columbia University Concert Band. Tickets are $3.50 and $2.50, and $1.50 for students. More information: 280-3826.

Street, and the speaker should know his subject. In discussing the large square-riggers that plied Cape Horn and the trans-Atlantic routes, Capt. Archie Horke will draw on 48 years of seafaring experience. The retired sailor is a member of the Marine Society of New York and the Council of American Master Mariners. The program begins at 7:30.

NEW TURN For the first time since the Bottom Line became a popular jazz and "new" music citadel in Greenwich Village, the club is featuring theater—radio theater suggestive of the old "Suspense" and "Lights Out" programs. The one-hour program includes two short radio play adaptations of Poe's suspense classic "The Telltale Heart" and Ambrose Bierce's story "The Damned Thing." Both suspense cameos will be performed by five actors entirely in the dark, for the sake of atmosphere.

Patricia Cooper has written and directed the program. She is a member of the directors' unit of the Actors Studio who formerly did radio work for Warner Bros. and Paramount.

The program is at 8:30 and 11:30 P.M. tonight (regular admission $4.50) and at 9 P.M. and midnight tomorrow and Saturday ($5.50). Jean-Luc Ponty, the jazz-rock violinist, follows as the current admission is $4.50. More information: 228-6300.

CLOSE HARMONY Music by Purcell, Byrd, Bach, Scarlatti and Handel will have three acclaimed performers tomorrow night with William Montgomery, flutist; Judy Hubbell, soprano; and Judith Norell, harpsichordist, as guest artists of the Concert Society series at 8:30 in the Bowman Room of the Biltmore Hotel, Madison Avenue at 43d Street. These informal events, geared for singles who appreciate classical music, also include post-performance mingling and coffee with the artists. Door admission is $4.50. More information: 749-5464.

Warriors Surprise Even Their Coach

By LEONARD KOPPELT

OAKLAND, Calif., April 21—The Golden State Warriors began the defense of their National Basketball Association championship in high style last night, running over the Detroit Pistons, 127-103.

"Frankly, I was surprised at how well we played and how much intensity we had after that 10-day layoff," said Coach Al Attles.

"We were terrible," said Herb Brown, coach of the Pistons. "Horrible. I won't make any excuses. We played a terrible game."

"It was terrific," said George Moscone, Mayor of San Francisco, taking a break from his strike-related problems across the Bay to bring two of his sons to the game.

All three were right. The Mayor's reaction was typical of that of an above-capacity crowd of 13,067 in the Oakland Coliseum-Arena.

Last year's playoffs had turned on the Warriors' fans from his strike-related problems across the Bay to bring two of his sons to the game.

In the opener of the four-of-seven-game series, the Warriors played in their style, which is to run, rebound, hit the open man, seal the ball and block shots.

And the crowd responded. That the Warriors had to wait a week for Detroit and Milwaukee to settle their preliminary round competition made everyone more impatient, and that much happier over the successful outcome.

As for the Pistons, both sides agreed the team could play much better.

"It wasn't surprised they'd be a little flat," said Attles, "coming off a tough series with a close victory on the road in the third game just two days ago. It would be natural for them to be a little drained emotionally. We can't assume they will be that way again."

The second game is here tomorrow night and the next two games in Detroit.

"We showed great lack of discipline," said Brown.

Eleanor Caughlan and Great Dane Ch. Danelagh's Saga

Coast Couple Enjoys Skills of Great Danes

By WALTER R. FLETCHER

The Germans developed the Great Dane to hunt the boar. Was and Eleanor (Weegie) Caughlan of San Francisco didn't train their Danes to hunt, but the three they own have proved very adept.

"We were told the dogs of hunted similarly to sight hounds," said Caughlan, an engineer.

"However, our Ch. Danelagh's Saga has an excellent nose and tracks game. She taught her two pups, Saga's Anya and Saga's Alata, to hunt and when the season is on in California they work as a pack."

The Caughlans, who also have homes in Wilton, Conn., and Leland, Mich., have owned Danes 10 years, but each has a much longer background in the dog-show world.

"My father, Samuel Williston, was an American Kennel Club director for 10 years," said Mrs. Caughlan. "He raised some very good Airedales. Caughlan's parents had Scotties."

"We decided taking care of terrier coats was just too much work and that we'd get a big short-coated dog," said the engineer. "Weegie bought me Danelagh's Quinn as a Valentine's Day present."

"The Dane didn't take too kindly to the show ring, so Mrs. Caughlan decided she'd try him in obedience. In just four shows, Quinn earned his C.D. (companion dog) degree."

"The only time he goofed was on an extremely hot day," said Mrs. Caughlan. "When I told him to sit he did, but not before he ambled

DENVER, April 21 (AP)—Top-seeded Jimmy Connors had to battle to defeat Phil Dent of Australia, 6-4, 7-5, at the start of a World Championship Tennis circuit tournament last night.

Connors, 27, defeated Dent, 26, in a four-set match, edging Fred McNeil, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3.

Tony Roche was toppled by Brian Gottfried, 7-6, 6-2. The Australian won his first tournament in four years last week at Charlotte, N.C.

Miss Evert Dno Wins OSAKA, Japan, April 21 (AP)—Chris Evert and Martina Navratilova defeated Glynis Coles of Britain and Alexandra Mouton of Romania, 6-0, 7-5, today in the opening round of the $100,000 Bridge-stone women's doubles tournament.

Finley Continues Suit Over Hunter

SAN FRANCISCO, April 21—A three-judge panel of the California State Court of Appeal heard arguments today in Charles O. Finley's continuing attempt to regain the rights to Jim (Catfish) Hunter.

Finley went to court to get the arbitrator's decision overturned. This move was rejected twice by Superior Court in the spring of 1975 and then appealed. The judges—Murray Draper, presiding; Harold C. Brown, and Folger Emerson—are expected to rule within 45 days.

Playing Fields of Battle Each Spills the Beans

Special to The New York Times
 LOUIS, April 21—“I want to make this perfectly clear to Unser. He hit two homers off me last year, one tonight. I'll hit any batter who is intimidated,” Lynn McGlothen, the St. Louis Cardinals' “brushback” pitcher last night started a battle with the New York Mets and caused a major league pitcher for the first time, shocked observers with his blunt admission. He had something that other pitchers have repeatedly said that fans have suspected for a long time: try to hit batters.

“Donald, the Mets' general manager, said he had to tell Chub Feeney, the president of the National League, about the incident in which both Del Unser and Tom Matlack, the Met pitcher, were hit by McGlothen's brushback pitches as much as I can about how Bruce Froemming, the plate umpire, is in a situation,” McDonald said. “He let four pitches either hit or nearly hit someone before ejecting Matlack too long to wait.”

White Sox Reached on Shirt Front

To give the Yankees the shirts they wanted, the Chicago White Sox protested and extracted an $18 George Steinbrenner yesterday, however, received an apology from the Chicago manager.

It was a day of diplomacy and the field at Yankee Stadium as made moves to eradicate any memory of the previous day when the White Sox protested the loss.

Carroll, who later relieved Johnson, changed to a blue-sleeved shirt instead of shredding his white one.

Back in Chicago, Bill Veeck struck back. Rolling up his shirtsleeves, he telephoned Roland Hemond, the Sox vice president, and instructed him to demand $18 from the Yankees, $9 for each shirt. That's the wholesale price; retail, they're $12 each.

Steinbrenner, the Yankees' principal owner, wrote out a check for the $18 payable to the Chicago White Sox.

Steinbrenner, meanwhile, received a note of apology from Richards. Believing that Steinbrenner had caused the whole fuss, the Chicago manager made some uncomplimentary remarks about George after Tuesday's game.

“He's in baseball now on parole,” Richards said, and he better concentrate on staying in the game rather than worrying about white shirts.”

Perhaps the irony of the situation was that the American League had approved the Chicago uniforms—shirts worn out of the pants and over white-sleeved sweatshirts—during the winter. It was on that basis that the White Sox protested the loss.

Petrov, who centers the crack line of Boris Mikhailov and Valery Kharlanov, was ousted from the Soviet national team after it won the Olympics.

In the current 1976 world championships at Katowice, Poland, Aleksandr Maltsev has replaced Petrov. Maltsev drew no penalties whatsoever in the national championship, while Petrov led the league with 48 minutes.

Moscow's Spartak club won the 1976 national title, finishing ahead of the Central Army club.

Heading the list of most penalized players was Vladimir Petrov of the Central Army Sports Club team, which walked out of a rough game with the Philadelphia Flyers here in January. Petrov's team was third in total penalty minutes with 307, behind Dynamo-Riga (345) and Wings of the Soviets (334), the other team that toured North America.

Soviet Sport's list of penalties in hockey

Levies

After Dave DeLoach, the American Federation of Hockey levied a fine of $14 members of the New York Nets and Spurs as the termination of the game Sunday in Toronto.

“I can serve as the players that I will identify of this only serve to the quality of DeLoach's actions will be fact.”

Several months ago Dan Maloney of the Detroit Red Wings was charged with assault by McMurry's office after trying to crack the ice at Maple Leaf Gardens with Brian Glennie's head. Last week Don Saleski, Joe Watson and Mel Bridgman of the Flyers were charged with a total of five counts of assault and one count of brandishing a dangerous weapon (Saleski's hockey stick) following a playoff game in Maple Leaf Gardens that inspired 163 minutes in penalties.

Yes, the Flyers Are Good for the Game

Tonight the Philadelphia Flyers return to Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto where Roy McMurry, the most valuable prosecutor in the Stanley Cup playoffs, is determined that the next great hockey coach shall not be Angelo Dundee.

Ever since their emergence as the Broad Street Bullies, the most controversial question in the National Hockey League has been whether or not the Flyers are good for the game. Perhaps the answer has really been yes all the time.

Now that three Flyers have been charged with assault, with a trial date to be set in June, the answer surely will be yes if Roy McMurry, the Attorney General in Ontario, obtains the convictions that presumably would jeopardize the N.H.L.'s acceptance of brutality as part of the game. Apologists contend that the N.H.L. should police itself. But since the N.H.L. has shown it is incapable of policing itself, somebody else has to try. That somebody is Roy McMurry, once an amateur defenseman himself, now a professional defenseman of hockey as it should be played.

Several months ago Dan Maloney of the Detroit Red Wings was charged with assault by McMurry's office after trying to crack the ice at Maple Leaf Gardens with Brian Glennie's head. Last week Don Saleski, Joe Watson and Mel Bridgman of the Flyers were charged with a total of five counts of assault and one count of brandishing a dangerous weapon (Saleski's hockey stick) following a playoff game in Maple Leaf Gardens that inspired 163 minutes in penalties.

The Maple Leaf's Candidate

Typically, the reaction of Clarence Campbell, the N.H.L. president, was that Roy McMurry was picking on visiting players. To this, Roy McMurry mentioned that his office had filed about 307 assault charges against amateur players in Ontario and had obtained “about a dozen” convictions. Even so, it would enhance the credibility of Roy McMurry's campaign if he were to arraign a Maple Leaf player. And a candidate exists—Kurt Schultz, a rookie defenseman imported for the playoffs as a sparring partner for belligerent opponents, notably Dave Schultz, the Flyers' notorious hit-man.

“After all,” Clarence Campbell said, “the Maple Leafs set the standard of conduct for the game, bringing that Kurt Walker up. Before the game was a couple of minutes old, Walker went out of his way to crosscheck Schultz, so Toronto's intentions of how they were going to play were quite obvious.”

But if Clarence Campbell is so aware of the Maple Leafs' intentions, he also should be aware that those intentions wouldn't be necessary if Dave Schultz and the other Flyer intimidators hadn't changed the philosophy

U.S. Gives Yanks Win, 10-7, With 17 Hits; Davis Cup Warning Cardinals' Pops Drop In for a 7-4 Victory

By TONY KORNHEISER
 The United States Tennis Association has declared its intention to withdraw from Davis Cup competition if South Africa is expelled or no sanctions are placed on nations that default for political reasons.

These issues are expected to arise at the July meeting of the Davis Cup Nations in London.

“Our position is that politics have no place in tennis,” Stan Mallis, U.S.T.A. president, said yesterday. “We feel we must stand up for this principle. If we are forced to withdraw, it will be a tragic thing, but not as tragic as using the Davis Cup as a political football.”

The Davis Cup, which was started in 1900, is an annual elimination tournament conducted at various sites over a year. It is designed to produce a world-champion nation. The defending champion is Sweden. The United States has won the cup 23 times, but was eliminated from the 1976 competition by Mexico.

One of the most prestigious events in tennis, the cup has recently become a political battleground, centering on South Africa, which practices the racial segregation policy of apartheid.

In 1974 India defaulted in the final rather than compete against South Africa, which is considered racist. In 1975 Colombia and Mexico also defaulted against South Africa for the same reason. And this year Mexico again defaulted against her.

At the Davis Cup Nations meeting in London last year, a resolution calling for the expulsion of South Africa was offered. But the United States threatened to withdraw if the resolution was approved. It was defeated, failing to get the necessary three-quarters majority of the 65 voting members.

This time the United States is going to the meeting with a strong stand against expelling South Africa and against countries seeking to politicize the cup.

“We're not aiming this at Mexico, but we can't allow politics into a sporting competition,” Mallis said. “Mexico has defaulted twice in a row now, and if it isn't suspended, or at least told that if it defaults again some sanction will be taken, then

By PARTON KEESSE
 Special to The New York Times
 ST. LOUIS, April 21—The New York Mets and St. Louis Cardinals played a plain old ordinary game of baseball today, and the Mets lost, 7-4. Maybe it was because the Mets played rather plain and ordinary compared to their first two games here, which they won, one a 17-inning thriller and the other a beanball war.

The Cardinals went right for the Mets' jugular this time, which proved to be a batted ball. A pair of pop flies that Little League infielders can catch eluded the Mets and let the Cards score four runs in the sixth inning and run off with the contest.

Left field was another desperate zone today for New York as the rookie, Benny Ayala, man-handled whatever came bouncing his way.

The Mets were missing two of their regular outfielders, which is why Ayala and Bruce Boisclair, another rookie, were playing there. John Milner had pulled thigh muscle and Del Unser nursed a swollen elbow, where he was hit by a Lynn McGlothen “duster” last night.

Bud Harrelson was given a rest for the second game in a row (a slight muscle pull in his right leg) and Mike Phillips was the shortstop who let the second pop-up drop in the Cards' sixth-inning rally.

Jerry Grote was the regular catcher, but it was his duet with Mickey Lolich, parodying the Sunshine Boys, that got the Cardinals rolling. After Ted Simmons doubled in the second—the first of his three hits—Lolich wild pitched him to third. But Grote lost the high-bouncing ball behind him, hurling Simmons home. Jerry's throw beat the Cardinal catcher, but it was too high and glanced off Lolich's glove.

Then Lolich struck out Mike Anderson, but the dipping ball bounced away from Grote again for a wild pitch, which let Anderson reach first as Jerry bounced his throw to Ed Kranepool.

The Cardinals later picked up an unearned run on an error by Ayala, but the Mets, with a pair of two-run innings featuring singles by Lolich, led 4-2 going to the sixth.

Then came the pop-flu scenario. Vic Harris led off with a towering pop behind Kranepool. He and Felix Millan did a cha-cha-cha under the ball and let it drop for a two-base hit.

Two groundouts and Lolich was cursing to himself. Instead of three outs, he had to pitch to Reggie Smith, and you can guess what happened. Smith hit a 2-run home run.

3 More Bases Stolen Against White Sox

By MURRAY CRESS
 The Yankees knew all spring they would be faster than a speeding bullet this season. But so far, they've been more powerful than a locomotive, too.

In unleashing their sizzling speed and their prolific punch once again yesterday, the Yankees crunched the Chicago White Sox, 10-7.

That they stole three bases in three attempts and increased their season total to 13 in 15 wasn't surprising. But their 10 runs and 17 hits raised their per-game average to nearly 7 runs and 11 hits, and that is surprising.

“No it isn't,” Manager Billy Martin insisted. “Our players never said we had a lack of power. The experts said it, and I hope you guys are wrong all year.”

In the latest explosive effort, Mickey Rivers and Chris Chambliss rapped three hits and drove in three runs apiece. Willie Randolph had a perfect four-hit game and Thurman Munson stroked three hits. Then there was Lou Piniella, who contributed two hits and knocked in two runs and saw his batting average drop .008 to .542.

The final score didn't indicate how far out of the game the Yankee feet and bats had put the White Sox. Rudy May retired the first 10 Chicago batters and allowed only two hits through the first seven innings.

Pete Varney's two-run homer in the eighth and Jack Brohamer's two-run triple in the ninth brought the White Sox closer than they deserved to be.

Chambliss' two-run homer in the first inning triggered a Yankee burst that reached its peak in a 12-hit, four-inning spurge that saw the Yankees pile up four hits and a lot of other clubs have.

Chambliss said, “But we're not lacking in power. We don't have two or three guys who can hit 20 home runs, so we're going to compensate for it by running. We also have about five guys who are capable of hitting .300.”

Running doesn't mean simply stealing bases; it also means taking an extra base on a single or a double and getting more runners into scoring position.

“I like to run,” said Graig Nettles. “I'd just as soon run every time I get on. It creates a lot of holes in the infield. It keeps the defense on their toes and makes them worry.”

Nettles apparently is going to start making teams worry. Noted primarily for his home run bat, the third baseman stole his second base yesterday, equalling his output for the previous three seasons. He has yet to be thrown out.

“It's called getting the steal sign,” Nettles said, explaining his new talent. “My speed is average or a little below average, but I get a good lead

 Special to The New York Times
 SAN ANTONIO, Tex., April 21—Two nerveless free throws by Larry Kenon with three seconds left canceled a furious last-quarter rally by Julius Erving and gave the San Antonio Spurs a 106-105 victory over the New York Nets tonight.

The victory tied the teams' American Basketball Association semifinal playoffs series at 3-3. The deciding game will be played Saturday night at the Nassau Coliseum.

Erving had scored 31 of his 41 points in the second half to lead the Nets back from a 10-point deficit to a one-point advantage with 23 seconds to play. He appeared to be all over the court, flying for offensive rebounds, putting in long jumpers and soaring above the crowd to bat away shots.

On San Antonio's last play, Kenon had a shot and missed. Billy Paultz got the foul circle and then Kenon was

Home Debuts Oct. 10

By GERALD ESKENAZI
Pro football's regular season will not return to New York (or debut in New Jersey) until Oct. 10. The Giants are scheduled to open the new stadium in the Meadowlands against the Dallas Cowboys that day while the Jets face the Buffalo Bills at Shea Stadium.
But the local clubs will each play their first four games on the road—the Giants, to make sure the new place is ready, the Jets, because the Meadowlands allow anyone else in until they're finished playing in Shea.
"I can't worry about playing on the road," said the Giants' coach, Bill Arnsparger, yesterday. "There's enough to worry about the things I can control."
Meanwhile, Coach Lou Holtz of the Jets, told of his team's schedule for its first year, was surprised, but managed a typical Holtz onslaught.
"You mean the schedule is here? I was hoping the Jets would sit this one out," Holtz said he "wasn't complaining, you understand," but he contended that playing the first four games on the road "is an unfair situation year in and year out. It doesn't help our situation any."
But Holtz saw the usual ray of sunshine (in 14 seasons, he says, his teams played while it rained only twice, and one of those occasions was in the Astrodome). "It will show us," he said, "what kind of team we are very early. We'll learn about ourselves."
The Giants should know even more for they play 10 straight road games, including their six preseason contests.
On paper, the Jets' schedule doesn't appear as frightening as last year's, in which they sank to a 3-11 year-long mark.
Jets Open in Cleveland.
They open at Cleveland, then move to Denver, Miami and San Francisco before their home opener. They will also play host to the Selmon Brothers and the new Tampa Bay franchise on Nov. 14. Seattle, the other new team, on Nov. 23. New Jersey, They have one four-game stretch in which they must play the Cardinals, Cowboys, Vikings and Steelers.
"It'll just be nice to be home," said Arnsparger, who never really had one since coming from Miami.
"The first year we played at the Yale Bowl—said that wasn't home. Then last year we were at Shea Stadium. Eventually, we'll use the new stadium to train at during the regular season. For this year, though, we'll stay at Pace."
Of the local teams, only the Jets are involved in a Monday-night affair, against the Patriots at New England on Oct. 18, both home teams will have a considerable edge in the second half of the campaign: each plays five of its final seven at home.
Of all the Jets' opponents, only the Colts and Bengals made the playoffs last season, so the Jets will have three games against playoff teams (they play the Colts twice, the giants, tough, face four clubs that made the playoffs (and have six games against them): St. Louis, Dallas, Minnesota, Pittsburgh.
For both clubs there are many unknowns. But the Giants do have the only superstar guaranteed to play in New York next season in Larry Csonka.
"It was enjoyable sitting down and talking to the guy," said Arnsparger. "I showed him films of the lub I had pieced together and told him to see for himself where we are."
JETS' SCHEDULE

Celtics Win As Cowens Scores 30

was at his best in the decisive third period when he scored 12 points, made three quick steals and triggered the fast break that enabled the Celtics to expand a 55-51 halftime advantage to 15 points midway through the quarter. The Braves didn't help themselves by committing 14 of their 30 turnovers in third quarter.
Cowens, playing in the playoffs for the sixth straight time since he was the Celtics' top draft choice in 1970, has gotten better with age. His passing, shooting and rebounding have been better this season than when he was the league's most valuable player in 1973.
"He just grabs those rebounds out of everybody's hands," said Paul Silas, the Celtics' rebounding specialist recently. "He doesn't go all-out wild or scramble continually, the way he used to. He is just doing everything better."
Cowens dominated Bob McAdoo, the N.B.A.'s leading scorer the last three seasons. With Silas, Cowens and Steve Kuberski taking turns on harassing McAdoo, the often double-teamed Buffalo star scored only 16 points, 15 less than his season average. He made only seven of his 16 shots, had only seven rebounds, missed several easy shots and was often called for traveling violations.
The Braves often did better with McAdoo, who fouled out in the closing minutes, on the bench.
With McAdoo off his game the Braves lacked the offensive power to match the 27 points by Jo Jo White and the 22 by 36-year-old John Havlicek, who was starting his 14th playoff series.
The Celtics, controlling the offensive boards, took 105 shots, 22 more than Buffalo did.
Clem Haskins, the Bullets' fourth guard, and Nick Weatherston, who had been in Coach K. C. Jones' doghouse for much of the season, played key roles in Washington's best playoff effort. The Bullets had been in a shooting slump in the previous three games and scored 79 and 76 points respectively, in their two losing efforts.

fouled by Erving and made his two free throws.
In the final three seconds, the Nets got the ball to Erving, but his long jump shot was wide and too hard.
The overflow crowd of 10,484 held a wild victory celebration after the game, throwing beer on the court, waving Texas flags and stomping to down-home country fiddle breaks.
The Nets played without their starting power forward, Rich Jones. Coach Kevin Loughery decided to hold Jones out of the game after a day full of a controversy that has boiled around him here.
Until the last two games, when it was clear that the officials were clamping down, it had been an exceptionally rough series and Jones was the principal target of abuse from San Antonio fans and press. The 225-pound forward, the least delicate of the Nets, was the main slinger in a bench-clearing brawl that erupted during Sunday's game here.
Jones, who was traded by the Spurs to New York for Billy Paulitz in September, was popular when he played here and still maintains a home in San Antonio. After he was traded, he wrote a letter of gratitude to the San Antonio fans that was printed in the papers here.
In the series, however, he has been called everything from choker to cheap-shot artist. After the Sunday game, John Begos, the San Antonio general manager, called him "trash—garbage with a capital G."
It was not a good day for

Jones today. First he learned he was among 14 New York and San Antonio players fined a total of $2,200 for Sunday's brawl.
Jones heard of his fine this afternoon, and a while later John Williamson told him of a "warning" broadcast on a local television station that a "sheriff" was waiting with a "subpoena" for him when he entered the arena tonight.
"I thought, what the heck are these people trying again," Jones said. "They done enough already this week."
Ready to Pack Up
Jones had a talk with Loughery two hours before the game. "I told him, 'I'm in a state right now where all I want to do is go back to my room, pack up my clothes and leave this place.'"
Loughery decided to hold him out of the lineup. "He was very, very upset," the coach said. He's been subjected to the greatest harassment of any individual I've seen, and I think it's unfair to subject him to any more."
As it turned out, the "subpoena" was a routine notice of a judgment concerning an unpaid $533.10 bill at a local department store. The judgment had been given in civil court a month ago and Kenneth Bealand, a local attorney, was waiting at the arena to advise Jones of it, a procedure required by Texas law.
Jones said his wife told him that she thought the bill had been paid by their financial consultant. He said he had first been advised of the case when the Nets played here in February.

Islanders Forcing Sabres To Change Their Tactics

By ROBIN HERMAN

The red imprints on Danny Gare's forehead and cheeks looked like early morning creases left over from a deep sleep. But it was close to 11 P.M. yesterday. The Buffalo Sabres, on their home ice, had just lost their third consecutive game to the relentless, bruising New York Islanders on a goal by Bert Marshall with 19 seconds remaining.
Tonight is game 6 of the Stanley Cup quarter finals and suddenly the Sabres, finalists last season, face elimination. The Islanders hold a 3-2 lead in the four-of-seven-game competition and have the opportunity to finish off the Sabres at Nassau Coliseum. A seventh game would be in Buffalo Sunday.
Gare's evolution from a precocious sniper with an instant wrist shot to a pit-sized puncher and slasher is part of the story of the Sabres' troubles. Ordinarily an elusive, sharpshooting team, similar in style to the Montreal Canadiens, the Sabres are attempting with little success to match the Islanders' robust style.
"For a team like ours, whose game is hitting, we're more accustomed to it," said Denis Potvin, the Islander defenseman. "They don't have everyone who hits, just a few. We've got everybody who hits."
Schoenfeld and Jerry Korab [Buffalo defenseman] try to carry the load for the whole team, so they get worn down early."

Schoenfeld, who checks hard and rubs the puck well when he is in form, had to leave Tuesday's game in the first period. His prolonged ice time and the hits he had absorbed from the Islanders aggravated a sore wrist, and he was still suffering from a sore ankle.
In the absence of Schoenfeld, Gare, the sophomore right wing who scored 50 goals in the regular season, tried to assume a more combative role. But it didn't blend with his usual offensive style, and his shotmaking suffered.
"It's unusual for him," said Potvin. "When he hits, he's not playing his game. He's out of position. He gets tired."
"But we play a different style hockey. When everybody's hitting, it's good for our game. We're in position."

Gare and his teammates were exhausted after the demoralizing 4-3 loss in Buffalo.
"They hit hard and it's very tiring," said Gare. "In a game like this I get hit a lot. I guess it's because I'm smaller [5 feet 9 inches, 170 pounds]."
"It's heartbreaking, but they haven't won four yet. Now we've got to win one in their building."
To stay alive in the quarter-final round, Buffalo must win tonight. Los Angeles must beat Boston and Toronto must beat Philadelphia. Each series stands at 3-2. Montreal has eliminated Chicago in four games. The semifinal round could begin as early as Sunday.

TEACHER'S INTRODUCES AN INEXPENSIVE WAY TO BUY EXPENSIVE SCOTCH.

We've just given Teacher's Scotch something in common with a lot of lesser scotches. A lesser price. But while we've reduced our quarts and half gallons, we haven't reduced what's inside them. It's still the same great taste that's distilled, blended and bottled in Scotland. The taste you paid more for. Only now you can get it for the price you would pay for an ordinary scotch. Which makes it an extraordinary buy.

Dorsey Gets a Bolivia Court Bid

Dorsey, who was chairman of the Corporation earlier because of the scanning illegal political contributions by Dorsey, has been ordered to appear before a magistrate in Pittsburgh April 29 to answer received from a Court about Gulf's payments in that Dorsey admitted in 5 testimony before Subcommittee that Dorsey had to buy a $110,000 for the late Rene Dorsey president of Dorsey to make contributions General Barriental party. Dorsey reportedly, Bo-secutors have filed charges against Dorsey and Carlos Dorsey's representative understood that Mr. Dorsey must appear before rate to answer six dealing with the the recipients and is of the Gulf con- in Bolivia. A for Gulf said the had been notified Dorsey's scheduled in court on April 1 no idea of what the Government are from Mr. Dorreceived raises amounting to 50 to 150 percent. The biggest percentage increase reported went to James McGowan, executive vice president of the General Motors Corporation, whose remuneration increased 152 percent to $403,125 a year. Other big gainers included Gus Marusi, chairman of the Borden Company whose pay was increased 117.1 percent to $491,767 and Elliott Estes, president of General Motors, who received a raise of 106.9 percent to $488,750. The report also showed that Harold S. Gessen, chairman of International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation, with a salary of $766,085, remained the highest paid American corporate leader by a wide margin. In second place was Charles G. Bluhorn, chairman of Gulf and Western Industries Inc., whose pay was raised 53 percent last year to $588,560. Paul Kolton, chairman of the American Stock Exchange, stressed yesterday that human judgment, and not technology, "must be the determining factor in structuring the proposed national securities market system." In a speech before the National Investor Relations Institute in New York, he said that no matter how the new system evolves, those who operate the markets and those who depend heavily on them "must be sure that we harness technology and direct what it will do and not let technology dictate the type of future market structure."

Administration sources reported yesterday that President Ford planned to nominate John W. Snow, a top Administration proponent of reforming the Government's regulation of transportation concerns, to head the agency that oversees highway safety. Mr. Snow, currently deputy undersecretary of the Department of Transportation, would succeed Dr. James Gregory as head of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. It was confirmed by the Senate. Dr. Gregory resigned the post on Feb. 26 after serving for nearly four years. Mr. Snow's nomination is expected to be sent to the Senate next week, these sources said. Mr. Snow, who is 37 years old, has a doctoral degree in economics from the University of Virginia and a law degree from George Washington University. He has been the chief spokesman for the Department of Transportation in the Administration's drive to introduce new competitive pressures into transportation industries by relaxing Federal regulations. #### Jarvis of New Oil Embargo

GO, April 21 (UPI)—The United States stands a "great chance" of another oil embargo—worse than two years ago, Federal Energy Administrator Jarvis said today. Jarvis, in remarks prepared for the American Power and Light Association, said the nation has been living on "borrowed time" too long, and if the countries which sell oil and petroleum products decide to stop the clock "it will be in for a crash refresher course in what life is like in the last embargo." This time, Mr. Jarvis said, it won't mean just long lines. In some places, it will mean no gasoline or oil. Jarvis wants to emphasize that this is not idle doom-mongering. "It is an all too real possibility," he said. "I am personally convinced that we stand a disturbing chance of being subjected to another embargo. The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has the power to do it, and they can be expected to make the most of it in the oil market they enjoy."

Anti-Dumping Bar Overruled

WASHINGTON, April 21 (Reuters)—The United States Trade Commission late today voted to overrule a two-year-old anti-dumping action against Canadian lead that has severely limited shipments of lead to this country. The unanimous vote of the six-member commission ruled that the two countries could be allowed to import lead without the inflated anti-dumping duties imposed in April, 1974, and without risk of injury to the lead producing industry. Upon the agency's decision, the United States is expected to order that the duty on the lead from two countries be dropped immediately. The decision is a split decision by the commission in January, 1974, which shipped over 80,000 tons of lead annually to the United States and Australia exported about 38,000 tons of lead this country.

Accountants Map Illegality Rule

Principal rule-making body of the accounting profession drafted a proposal on how independent auditors deal with illegality committed by corporate clients. The "exposure draft" drawn up by the Auditing Standards Committee of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants is being mailed out to about 10,000 accountants. The draft, barely garnered a two-thirds committee vote required for publication. Approval by the rule-making body will also require two-thirds vote of the 21-member standards commission. The proposal states that an auditor must be aware of illegality across corporate illegality and should report it at items that suggest abnormal business transactions.

ASSAULTS ON TELEPHONE POLICY

F.C.C. has given small competitors in the private long-distance telephone business the right to charge lower rates for identical services offered by A.T.&T. Most of the standards that apply to those selling telephone equipment are similar to those applied to A.T.&T. and independent telephone companies. Despite heavy criticism from some shareholders, who argued that all employees should be included, a management proposal to sell a large number of unused common shares to management-level employees only was overwhelmingly approved. Continental Oil Dividend Up Directors of the Continental Oil Company raised the quarterly dividend yesterday to 60 cents from 50 cents, payable June 14 to holders of record May 7. It represents the fourth increase in the last two and a half years, the first being 2 1/2 cents, the next two 5 cents each and this time 10 cents quarterly.

COMPANIES LIST VARIED RESULTS

assets approximates $45 million.
3M Company
The Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Company, known as the 3M Company, realized a 28.3 percent increase in first-quarter net income of $68.9 million, or 60 cents a share on a worldwide sales gain of 11.4 percent to $827.9 million, the company's report disclosed yesterday.

Last year's first quarter net was $53.7 million, or 47 cents a share on sales of $743.2 million. Foreign currency translations reduced 1976 net by $7.9 million, compared with a reduction of about $900,000 a year ago for which the net was restated.
Continental Can Co.
The mid-1975 pickup in demand for products across the board lifted first-quarter results of the Continental Can Company Inc. to records, the big packaging producer reported yesterday. Net earnings rose 126.9 percent to $21.1 million, or 72 cents a share, from the depressed year ago net of $9.3 million, or 32 cents a share. Worldwide sales and operating revenues were $803.9 million, a gain of 12.3 percent from $716 million. Foreign currency translation reduced earnings this year by $2.5 million, or 8 cents a share and by $2.6 million, or 8 cents a share a year ago.

Cost reduction programs, improved productivity and selected product price increases offset higher raw material costs, energy and labor, Robert S. Hatfield, chairman, explained. Greatest year-to-year gains were made by forest products and world metal can business, he said, adding that "Continental should have a very good year."

International Nickel
Reduced metal prices and deliveries of nickel and rolling mill products, while operating costs continued to rise, contributed to the 59.1 percent drop in first-quarter net income of the International Nickel Company of Canada Ltd. The net was $23.3 million, or 31 cents a share, against $56.1 million, or 76 cents a share, a year ago. Sales were $433.7 million against $419.4 million off 3.4 percent.

Accounting changes for foreign currency translation chiefly the rise of the Canadian dollar, also lowered profits by $12 million, or 16 cents a share while a year ago earnings gained $3.4 million, or 5 cents a share. Shareholders at their meeting in Toronto yesterday voted to change the company's name to Inco, Ltd.

Hearings Examine Earthquake Peril At Nuclear Plants

Special to The New York Times
WHITE PLAINS, April 21—Hearings to examine the possibility that earthquakes could damage three nuclear power plants at Indian Point opened today with a lawyer for the Consolidated Edison Company contending that the plants were safe enough to withstand the most intense quakes that could be expected in the region. The Indian Point reactors are on the banks of the Hudson in the village of Buchanan and near the Ramapo Fault, an ancient geological fissure that extends through parts of New Jersey and Rockland County into Westchester County. Two of the plants are owned by Con Edison, and the third is owned by the State Power Authority, but all three are operated by Con Edison. The hearings, which are scheduled to last until Friday and will continue next week in Bethesda, Md., are being conducted by Michael C. Farrar, a lawyer, and Dr. John E. Buck, a nuclear physicist. Both are members of the three-member Atomic Safety Licensing Appeal Board. The third member, Lawrence R. Quarles, a nuclear engineer, had been injured in an accident and could not attend. The board is to consider the seismic characteristics of the Indian Point region and decide whether the regulations under which the three plants were designed and constructed meet the possible earthquake dangers discovered by recent geological investigations.

Personal Finance: Direct Deposits

By LEONARD SLOANE
In the eight months that the Treasury Department has allowed direct deposits of Social Security checks in financial institutions, 3.7 million of the 36.3 million recipients of Social Security and Supplemental Security Income benefits have chosen to have their checks sent directly to commercial banks, savings banks, and credit unions.

Bankers — aware of the value of obtaining even a portion of the $50 billion plus in annual retirement, disability and survivor benefits a few days early — contend that such problems are rare rather than common in place. Instead they contend of no exposure to theft, no trips to the bank and no waiting in lines.

Western Union in a Deal for CPI Units

By HERBERT KOSHEZ
The Western Union Corporation announced yesterday that it had signed a contract with Communications Properties Inc. of Austin, Tex., to acquire all capital stock of CPI Microwave Inc. and certain assets of CPI Satellite Television Communications Inc., for about $13 million in preferred stock and notes.

Both CPI Microwave and CPI Satellite are subsidiaries of Communications Properties Inc. An agreement in principle for the transaction was reached Feb. 23, 1976.

The two companies provide television station transmission service. Western Union said that necessary applications for the transaction would be filed with the Federal Communications Commission promptly so that the acquisition can be completed by July 31. Alaska Interstate Sells Northwest Energy Interest

The Alaska Interstate Company announced in Houston yesterday that it had sold its 6.2 percent interest in the Northwest Energy Company, parent of the Northwest Pipeline Company, to the Apco Oil Corporation for $7,875,000.

Apco also acquired all rights of Alaska Interstate under the 1971 joint venture agreement between Apco, Alaska Interstate and the Tipperary Corporation, which was known as the Apco group.

Northwest Energy announced also that Alaska Interstate received $250,000 plus ownership of certain oil and natural gas leases and lease application in Alaska.

The Apco group had purchased 20 percent of the stock of the Northwest Pipeline Company in 1971 as part of a court-ordered divestiture of the El Paso Natural Gas Corporation. The remaining 80 percent of Northwest Pipeline stock was distributed to El Paso shareholders under a non-voting trust agreement.

The sale of the interest to Apco, consisting of 261,000 shares of Alaska Interstate stock, has brought an end to law suits in the United States District Court of Delaware resulting from Alaska Interstate efforts last year to gain control of the Apco group's voting stock.

Stock Prices Rise On Amex and O-T-C, Trading Is Moderate

Prices on the American Stock Exchange and in the over-the-counter market closed higher yesterday in moderate trading. The best gain on the Amex was made by the Penn Traffic Company, which advanced 2 1/2 to 28 1/2. The company announced that it had entered into an agreement with a group of shareholders to repurchase 7 percent of its outstanding common shares for $32 a share. The Amex market-value index rose 0.40 to 108.47, with advances leading declines by 373 to 280. The price of an average share increased 4 cents. Volume amounted to 2.76 million shares on Tuesday.

Trading in Amex issues, including transactions on regional exchanges and the over-the-counter market, rose to 2.91 million shares from 2.83 million on Tuesday.

In counter trading, the NASDAQ industrial index rose 0.42 to 99.33, while the composite index was up 0.16 to 90.77. A total of 511 issues rose while 333 fell. Volume climbed to 8 million shares from 7.28 million the day before.

Option trading on the Amex rose slightly to 40,770 contracts from 38,836 on Tuesday. Open interest totaled 692,228 unexpired or unexercised contracts. On the Chicago Board options Exchange, 63,488 contracts traded, compared with 86,944 contracts the day before. Open interest amounted to 1,071,358 contracts.

Gasoline Output Up; Motor Fuel Supply Continues to Drop

Gasoline production in the United States increased but stocks of motor fuel continued to drop as good weather encouraged greater automobile use.

In the weekly report issued by the American Petroleum Institute, the nation's refiners operated at 88.7 percent of capacity, turning out 6.79 million barrels a day of gasoline in the week ended April 16. The output of April 16 was the highest in the week of April 9. Refiners operated at 87.4 percent of capacity with production of 6.57 million barrels a day of gasoline. On April 18, 1975, the comparable week a year ago, the nation's refiners operated at 80.6 percent of capacity turning out 6.95 million barrels of gasoline a day. Gasoline stocks nonetheless dropped to 233.58 million barrels in the latest week from 236.18 million barrels in the April 9 week. Last year's stocks were 236.69 million barrels. Petroleum figures in millions of barrels follow:

U.S. Will Impose New Duty On Common Market Beef

WASHINGTON, April 21 (AP)—The United States will impose a new duty of 21 cents a pound on imported beef from European Economic Community nations, Assistant Treasury Secretary David Macdonald said today.

Mr. Macdonald added that the duty was being levied to offset the effect of an export subsidy that Common Market governments give to their beef exporters. At present, the only beef exported to the United States by a Common Market nation is from Ireland.

DiLorenzo Tells of Reaction to Inquiry

ASBURY on four counts of perjury in an eight-count indictment obtained in September 1973 by Maurice H. Nadjar, the state's special anticorruption prosecutor. At a previous trial of the indictment, a jury acquitted him of two counts, but deadlocked on the rest. Another count has been severed for future trial, and two counts have been dismissed.

Asked to 'Go Easy': The indictment alleges that Judge DiLorenzo lied about the purpose of a meeting he requested and obtained with Anthony Piazza, former assistant commissioner of the Waterfront Commission of New York Harbor. Mr. Piazza complained to the Appellate Division that the judge had asked him to "go easy" on investigating friends and neighbors who were being questioned on alleged underworld influence on the Brooklyn pier.

Mr. Klein testified yesterday that he had questioned Judge DiLorenzo about the meeting at the direction of the Appellate Division on two separate occasions.

At the end of the second session, he testified: "As I was gathering my papers, there was Judge DiLorenzo looking at me. I looked at him, and he said, 'Can't do a favor for anyone anymore.' I said nothing, I was absolutely quiet."

Mr. Fitzgerald testified that on learning of the Appellate Court investigation, he telephoned Judge DiLorenzo, whom he had met frequently when the judge was a district judge. He said there was no basis for the investigation. All he had done was put in a good word for a friend," according to Mr. Fitzgerald, who is now a reporter for The Daily News.

Steven Sawyer, an assistant to Mr. Nadjar, read to the jury portions of a transcript of Judge DiLorenzo's replies to questions about his meeting with Mr. Piazza. The judge's testimony then was that at the time of the meeting he knew nothing about Mr. Piazza's involvement in the investigation of the judge's friends "until he told me himself he was investigating Thomas Marzotta."

Judge DiLorenzo identified Mr. Marzotta as a long-time friend. Previous witnesses at the current trial identified him as the relative of Carlo Gambino, the reputed Mafia leader.

Knoxville Honors Dr. King

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., April 21 (AP) — The City Council has designated the second Sunday in January as a city holiday in honor of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., the slain civil rights leader. The council approved the holiday resolution last night but specified that city employees would not receive pay for the holiday. An earlier proposal that the council adopt a paid holiday honoring Dr. King was rejected on the ground that it would cost the city too much money.

"Can you show me how I would look with my new nose?"

By Dr. Ralph Dichter & Dr. Victor B. Syracuse

AND LARGE PRINTING

This most informative new book is written in a straightforward question and answer format by two New York plastic surgeons. It covers the entire range of modern cosmetic surgery... face lift, nasal reconstruction, breast alteration, eyelid correction, hair transplant, skin peeling. There are descriptive illustrations and photographs. This is your own private consultation. It discusses, reassures, tells it all in it.

How kinky is Barbra? Only her hairdresser knows for sure

(Photographs by: Harry Benson (2), Giancarlo Botto/Sygma, Robert M. Eginton, Henry Grossman, Tony Korody/Sygma, Stephanie Maze, John Olson, Ken Regan, Camera 5, and Stanley Irnick.)

New Namath? Quarterback Richard Todd, the Jets' first round draft choice, has a good chance to step into Joe's white shoes one of these days. He wears the same size...and Namath's been coaching him for two years.

Super Streisand says hairdresser-lover-manager Jon Peters "has done a lot to open my life." Their rock re-make of A Star is Born "is the story of our life...it's got love and sex...we laugh, we fight, we spit at each other." Does Jon still do her hair? "He never fools with it except when we're making out."

The kindest cut. Call it the Dorothy Hamill, the 'Wedge' or 'Wash & Wear Hair,' it's the easy way to wear the stiff. Sassoon started it, but good skate Hamill put it over the top. Here, it's worn by Mrs. Neil Sedaka.

Andy Warhol gets measured for a portrait by Jamie Wyeth. After the two did paintings of each other at Andy's factory, Pop's pop said: "I think he's peculiar. Maybe even more peculiar than I am."

That's funny, he doesn't look like Abbie Hoffman. The Fun Fugitive had plastic surgery, giving him "one nice Aryan nose and rosy Anglo cheeks." Where's Abbie? Who nose?

David Stillings is the Rod McKuen of supermarkets. He hawks poems in Florida shopping malls...composes rhymes to order...mounts 'em on redwood plaques...takes in $175 a week. Well, it could be verse.

Will Barbara Walters leave NBC's show to become an ABC woman? Well, at least she sleep past 5 a.m. "My dream is to stay up until all hours reading trashy novels."

Malachi Martin's book, Hostage to the Devil, tells of the possession and exorcism of five living Americans. Demons, says the ex-Jesuit priest, are a "malodorous, loathsome, shameful, mucky" business.

Sara Bernhardt lives? No, it's her great-great-granddaughter, Sylvia Reichenbach. A search for Bernhardt memorabilia turned up live-ringer, Sylvia.

How would you like to meet a giant People? Here's your big chance. The new People Magazine is the biggest yet...with more pages of advertising and editorial than any single issue we've ever published. Get into it and you'll see why People's got momentum like nothing else in magazines. Momentum? On July 19, People is going up another 200,000. To a new rate base of 1,800,000. And that's after less than two and a half years! Every week, 11,088,000 adults* are going to be reading the magazine. Over eleven million. Some audience. The clincher is who those millions are. They're the young, educated, prospering, urban women and men who make things happen. They respond to People because it's their special magazine. It's now. The Scene in a Magazine. The mid-70's in print. And these are the mid-70's people...the very best prospects for all kinds of people products. Like cars, clothes, food, cosmetics, liquor, tobacco, travel. In People, you can afford to talk to them with real frequency. Because the out-of-pocket cost is so low. Yes, People's your brand new marketing opportunity. It's your new media option. *Publisher's estimate.

Suddenly, it's the place to be.
